EXTENSIVE LOGGING

Stevens Point Journal: The Week Lumber Co., has its logging operations well under way for the season and plans to cut more timber this winter than was cut during the season of 1915-1916. This will mean more extensive operations at the mills here during the coming summer.

The company's camps at Moon, west of Mosinee, and near Unity are now in full operation and Bert Austin of Rozellville, a logger for the Stevens Point company, has also been cutting timber all summer and will continue during the winter. The company may also employ another logger in the Mosinee district.

The Moon camp employs forty-five men and a number of teams, the log haul being a short one. William Larson is the foreman and lumbermen state that the camp is an ideal one. It consists of a village of eleven timber buildings. Steel bunks with springs are furnished the men and the place is conducted according to the best methods known in modern lumber camps.

The camp near Unity is in charge of O. L. Roseth, Sr., and also employs about forty-five men. The logs cut must be hauled some distance to the company's spur at Romeo and the steam log hauler is used there.

Mr. Austin has about twenty-five men and five teams. This year's logging totaled about 6,000,000 feet of pine, hardwood and hemlock, but the coming season will see a considerably larger cut. The proportions are expected to be about the same, 25 or 33 per cent of pine and hardwood and the remainder hemlock. The crews are now cutting and skidding the timber and as soon as snow and ice come the heavy hauling will begin.

DEATH OF EUGENE MARSEAU

Eugene Marseau, one of the old residents of the town of Rudolph, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Delphine Whinnan of Stevens Point last Saturday. Deceased was 80 years of age and was one of the early settlers of Rudolph, where he lived for many years. He was survived by three sons and one daughter, they being Nicholas and Camiel Marseau of Rudolph, Clement Marseau of Mosinee and Mrs. Delphine Whinnan of Stevens Point.

MACHINE IS WONDERFUL INVENTION

Last week Geo. W. Paulus received a Telegraphone, which is, in some respects, one of the most remarkable machines in existence today, and so far as known, is the only machine of the kind in the state of Wisconsin.

The Telegraphone is for the purpose of reproducing sound the same as the phonograph, graphophone and a dozen others of the same kind, but is different from all the rest in some of the essentials that go to make up the outfit. Most of the talking machines have a metallic point or something of the kind that scratches the record on a disc or cylinder, and then by running the disc or cylinder thru the machine again the sound is reproduced by the irregularities on the surface of the disc or roller.

The Telegraphone works differently, although it produces much the same result in the end. In this machine the record is made on a fine steel wire and instead of being scratched on the surface is put into the wire by magnetism, and the result is that when the wire is run thru the machine again the sound is reproduced. There are about six miles of wire on the machine, which takes more than half an hour to run thru, and the result is that a continuous lot of conversation or music can be reproduced on the machine that will take half an hour to reproduce.

One of the most remarkable features of the machine is the fact that when it is desired to put a new record on the wire, all that is necessary is to press a lever and go ahead with the dictation, and the old record is obliterated and the new one put on in its place, there being no traces of the old one left. Another feature of the machine is that it can be hitched onto an ordinary telephone by the simple insertion of a plug, and any conversation that takes place over the line is permanently recorded by the machine, both sides of the conversation being taken down.

The machine is used more especially for dictation than anything else, as it is very easy to make a record and there are no changes to make from recording to reproducing. By installing wires records on the machine can be made from any part of the building, the machine remaining in the one place where it is handy to the stenographer who is transcribing the notes.

Mr. Paulus has taken the state agency for the machine and will be pleased to exhibit it to any person who may be interested in it.

POTATOES SELL FOR $2

Wausau, Nov. 6.—James Stevenson bought 700 bushels of Triumph potatoes from E. Mikkelson for $2 per bushel, or $1400. The stock is extra fancy and the price is the highest paid here at any time. Mikkelson has the reputation of raising the largest number of potatoes on all acre and always has exceptionally good stock.

Potatoes are quite plentiful here while a great deal of the stock is still in the hands of the farmers, several cars will be shipped and a ready market at top prices greets the growers. E. Mikkelson of Green Bay are loading a car of rutabagas. Owing to the high price of potatoes these are in good demand.

AN INVITATION

—We extend a cordial invitation to every citizen of Grand Rapids and vicinity to attend the demonstration of Aladdin Cooking Utensils next week, commencing Monday, Nov. 13. Through the courtesy of the Cleveland Metal Products Co. we have secured the services of one of their expert demonstrators, who will prepare and cook foods in the Aladdin Aluminum Cooking Utensils.

Every woman in this vicinity should see how quickly foods can be cooked and how much better it tastes than when cooked in other ways.

JOLLIFICATION BANQUET

The Christian Endeavor society of the First Methodist church pulled out its annual Jollification Banquet at the church parlors last evening. That the affair has grown to be important is shown by the fact that although the banquet costs the banqueters a dollar a plate, more than one hundred places were laid.

As usual the young people of the society outdid themselves in the matter of decoration and menu. The overhead decorations were mainly of princess pine and bitersweet berries. Potted plants graced the tables, and chrysanthemums filled in various rocks and corners. Not only was the menu well arranged and planned, but also very dainty and prettily served.

Between the courses various musical numbers were rendered by Miss Esther Witte, Fullback Grignon, Ben and Axel Anderson, Frank Muehlstein and Rev. H. B. Johnson. Every number was graciously received and heartily applauded. At the conclusion of the banquet the pastor of the congregation, the Rev. C. A. Mellicke, bishop of Kellner and Ten Mile Creek, as toastmaster announced the presence of three speakers of state-wide reputation. He called first upon the Rev. R. J. Locke of the Congregational church. After a few witty opening remarks Rev. Locke addressed the assembly upon the necessity and blessing of "rejoicing in the Lord." Let the joyousness of your outward life be a testimony of the christian joy within.

Personal liberty, the will and the won't, and the power and formation of habits, was the theme of the second speaker's discourse. To say that Prof. Jackson had a message for his audience goes without saying. Every body knows that when Prof. Jackson faces an audience he always says something that is provocative of thought. He was at his best last night, combining wit, humor and philosophy in that entertaining way which is entirely his own.

One who has been present at every banquet for several years past is the field secretary of the state Christian Endeavor Union, the Rev. Edgar T. Farrell of Milwaukee. As the last speaker he brought a message from his friend, Mr. Charles B. Hughes, candidate for the presidency, to Moravians and Christian Endeavor of Wisconsin.

The entire banquet was a financial and spiritual success. Great credit is due the young people of this enterprising congregation for the manner in which they handle these affairs. The next banquet will be held in November, 1917.

ELKS START WORK ON MINSTREL SHOW

A meeting was held at the Elk hall on Saturday evening for the purpose of discussing the matter of holding a minstrel show this coming winter, and it was decided to hold the show, and it will be put on some time before Christmas unless something happens that is not now foreseen.

This minstrel by the Elks has been an annual event for a number of years past, and they have during this time put on some pretty good stuff, and there has never been a time when the public has not turned out in good shape and given them a hearty reception.

Art Mulvey will have charge of affairs this year, and it is safe to say that the show will be equal, if not superior, to anything that has gone before in this line. As soon as things have been lined up, regular meeting for rehearsals will be held so that everything can be handled in the best shape possible.

NEW SOCIETY TO ORGANIZE.

At the home of Mrs. McNaughton at Fort Edwards tomorrow afternoon there will be organized a society to raise a fund for the French wounded. The society will include Nekoska, Port Edwards and Grand Rapids and all of the ladies of these places are invited to be present and join. Meetings will be held weekly.

NEW STREET COMMISSIONER.

At the meeting of the city council last night John Nash presented his resignation as superintendent of public works and Ed T. McCarthy was appointed to fill the vacancy. Mr. McCarthy has been one of the assistants under Mr. Nash and will no doubt give the people good service.

Fred LaBrot has purchased a Ford Touring car the past week. George Delap and son left this noon for Jackson county to hunt deer.

Will George and John Tomczyk left today for Conrad to spend a week deer hunting.

Mrs. J. Van Alstyne and daughter Virginia are visiting with relatives at Tomah.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. West of Alberta, Canada are visiting at the W. L. Compton home.

Mr. and Mrs. John Mosher are rejoicing over the arrival of a baby girl at their home on Nov. 4th.

Mr. and Mrs. Nic Polzer of Appleton have been guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Weiland the past week.

Mrs. Herman Stebbes of the South Side entertained a number of friends at a six o'clock dinner on Friday evening.

Will Suhr has purchased the old Kellogg Bros lumber office and moved it near his home and will remodel it into a residence.

Miss Lydia Fahrner entertained fifteen of her friends at a salmagundi party on Friday evening. Light refreshments were served and all report a pleasant time.

WAUSAU COMPANY BUYS STEVENS POINT PLANT

According to the Stevens Point Journal a deal has been consummated by which the Wausau company known as the Wisconsin Valley Electric company has bought the lighting plant at Stevens Point. The plant will be entirely rebuilt in the city of Stevens Point and a transmission line run down from Mosinee to connect up with the generators owned by the company.

The Wausau company has promised them current at the same rate that it is being sold at Wausau and Merrill, and this will be a very substantial reduction over the rate they have been paying in the past. They also promise an unlimited amount of power, and it is expected that more will be used under the new rate.

WILSON AHEAD IN RACE FOR OFFICE

While it is possible at this stage of the game to predict the election of almost anybody to the office of president and not be severely censured, still the indications are at the present time that Woodrow Wilson will be the next president of the United States.

The only states in which there was any doubt was Minnesota and California, and Wilson is ahead in one of these, the indications are that he will be re-elected. The democrats have claimed a victory for Wilson ever since Wednesday noon, and the republicans have been gradually relinquishing hope since that time.

The latest report, received at 12 o'clock states that with two thirds of the precincts heard from in California, Wilson is 4500 ahead and the remaining precincts are supposed to be favorable to the democrats.

In Minnesota with 223 precincts heard from Hughes is 445 ahead. It is claimed that either state will elect it for Wilson.

The first claim of a republican victory was made because the eastern states, and especially New York, had gone republican. Tammany had failed to support the president and it was supposed that the way New York went was the way the country would go. That they were mistaken in cheering news to every democrat in the country outside of the Tammany ring, as the organization has for years dominated the national elections. When a president can win out against Wall street and Tammany he is really doing something out of the ordinary.

While the national ticket won out, the boys in the county did not fare so well. The republicans having made a clean sweep of the offices up to the court house. The vote in the county was as follows:

Governor
Phillip	2869
Williams	2358
Phillip's majority	516
U. S. Senator
LaFollette	3222
Wolfe	2081
LaFollette's majority	1241
Congress
Browne	3184
Kalmes	1961
Browne's majority	1223
State Senator
Witter	3243
Hoelme	2015
Witter's majority	1228
Member of Assembly
Whittingham	3064
Mickels	2172
Whittingham's majority	892
County Clerk
Church	2805
Nobles	2592
Church's majority	213
County Treasurer
Johnson	2287
Whier	2337
Johnson's majority	650
Sheriff
Normington	3266
Boell	2219
Normington's majority	1047
Clerk of Court
Beyer	3269
Kraske	1995
Beyer's majority	1274
District Attorney
Roberts	2990
Edwards	2425
Roberts majority	565
Register of Deeds
Ebbe	2709
Hoffman	2705
Ebbe's majority	4

At the present writing there is still two voting precincts to hear from the towns of Carey and Hiles, but it is not expected that these will make any material difference in the final result as they are both republican towns and do not poll a very large vote.

Hughes carried the county by only 253, which with the varying results all along the line, would indicate that there were a large number of splits and that every man voted just the way he wanted to.

MISS PETERSON AT MARSHFIELD

People who love good music will be glad to know that May Peterson is going to Marshfield Wednesday evening, November 15, appearing at the Adler theater under the auspices of a local committee of musicians. Miss Peterson, the daughter of a Methodist minister, was born at Oshkosh, struggled as an organist to perfect her art and was swept into the ranks of the world's greatest singers three years ago with a signal triumph in grand opera at the Opera Comique, Paris. She returned to America in the second year of the war and has been touring the country ever since then. Her initial concert at Marshfield last February brought her a crowded house. The program for next Wednesday includes a number of the simpler songs which make a universal appeal.

WILL GO TO APPLETON. Geo. P. Berkey, who has been connected with the Consolidated Water Power and Paper Co. during the past eight years, expects to move to Appleton in the near future to make his home since his election as secretary of the Interlake Paper company, as he will have the management of that plant. Mr. and Mrs. Berkey have many friends in this city who will be sorry to see them leave.

E. B. Redford, who has been cashier of the Bank of Grand Rapids, has taken Mr. Berkey's place for the present.

GREEN BAY, WISCONSIN.

MILLION DOLLAR DEAL GOES THROUGH

During the past week the Consolidated Water Power and Paper Company of this city has purchased the land mill and other holdings of the Interlake Paper Company. The mill is located at Appleton and the timber lands are situated in northern Minnesota, Wisconsin and Canada. It is stated that the purchase involved the sum of $1,500,000, although the price paid for the proposition is not given out by the interested parties.

The Interlake company manufactures sulphite, one of the essential ingredients of print and many other kinds of paper. As the local company has never owned a sulphite mill it has been necessary to buy this ingredient, which will be obtained since the new plant was bought. It is expected that the company will continue to furnish supplies to the customers that have been patronizing it in the past.

It is stated that the Appleton plant has a daily capacity of 65 tons of sulphite, which means that a number of mills can be supplied with what they want in this line, especially as paper makers have learned to be a trifle saving since the high prices became prevalent.

MACKINNON-JENKINS

Miss Mildred Mackinnon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Mackinnon of this city, and Mr. James Jenkins of Ashtabula, Ohio, were married in this city Saturday morning, Nov. 4, at the Episcopal church performing the service that made them man and wife.

The wedding was a quiet one, only the relatives of the contracting parties being present. The ceremony took place in the drawing room which had been decorated for the occasion in a most tasteful and artistic manner.

After the ceremony dinner was served to those present, covers being laid for thirty-six. Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins left on the noon train on their wedding tour, at the conclusion of which they will make their home at Madison for the coming year, where the groom is a student at the University of Wisconsin. Next spring they expect to go to Vancouver where Mr. Jenkins has a position awaiting him.

The bride is well known to our citizens, having been born and reared in this city, is a graduate of Grafton Hall and later at St. Mary's school in New York City. She has many friends here among both old and young, and was an accomplished young lady when it was a pleasure to meet. The groom is a son of General John Jenkins and is a young man of good presence and during his time in the city has made friends of those he has come in contact with. The Tribune unites with their many friends in extending congratulations.

DEATH OF MRS. EMMONS

Mrs. N. E. Emmons died at her home in this city on Monday noon after an illness since the previous Tuesday. At that time she was taken with a nose bleed while on the train between this city and New Lisbon. She secured medical assistance at the time and returned to her home in this city. Her sickness was not considered dangerous at first, but it developed later that there was something decidedly wrong and later she became unconscious, and from this state she never rallied until the end came on Monday.

Deceased was born at Columbus, Wisconsin, in 1836. She was married in 1870 to N. E. Emmons and came to this city with her husband in 1871, and has since made her home here. Mr. Emmons having died about twenty years ago. The surviving members of the family are four daughters, they being Misses Edna, Ruth and Stella Emmons and Mr. Rest Garrison. Mrs. Emmons has always been a devout Methodist and was one of the active workers in the church up to the time of her death. The funeral was held on Wednesday forenoon from the home, with services later at the church, same being conducted by Rev. H. C. Logan.

JOHNSON-JOHNSON

The marriage of Miss Mabel Johnson, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Johnson of Saratoga to Mr. James Johnson, also of Saratoga, took place at the home of the bride's parents at ten o'clock Saturday morning, November 4, 1916. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. John Johnson. Rev. H. B. Johnson performed the ceremony. The service was a quiet affair, only the members of the two families being present. The bride and groom were joined by those of the young couple's friends, and hopes that they may live long and happily in their new home in Saratoga township.

LOCALS WIN FROM MERRILL

The Merrill football team was here on Saturday and lost to the locals by a score of 26 to 7. While the locals did not play as close a game as they have done at some of their contests, still they had no trouble in winning over their opponents, and there was no time during the game when Merrill had any chance to get the game. The score made by Merrill was just at the last end of the play when they intercepted a forward pass by our boys and made a touchdown. There was a good-sized crowd out to see the game.

AN INVITATION

We extend a cordial invitation to every woman in Grand Rapids and vicinity to attend the demonstration of the Aladdin Cooking Utensils next week, commencing Monday, Nov. 13. Through the courtesy of the Aladdin Metal Products Co. we have secured the services of one of their expert demonstrators, who will prepare and serve food in the Aladdin Aluminum Cooking Utensils. Every woman in this vicinity should see how quickly foods can be cooked and how much better it tastes than when cooked in other wares.

JOLLIFICATION BANQUET

The Christian Endeavor society of the First Moravian church pulled off its annual Dollar Banquet at the church last evening. That the affair has grown to be important is shown by the fact that although the banquet costs the banqueters a dollar a plate, more than one hundred plates were laid.

As usual the young people of the society did themselves in the matter of decoration and menu. The overhead decorations were mainly of princess pine and bitternut berries. Potted plants graced the tables, and chrysanthemums filled in various places and corners. Not only the menu well arranged and planned, but also very daintily and prettily served.

Between the courses various musical numbers were rendered by Miss Edith White, Fullback Grignon, Ben and Axel Anders, Frank Muehlstein and Rev. H. B. Johnson. Every number was graciously received and heartily applauded. At the conclusion of the banquet, the pastor of the church, the Rev. C. A. Mellick, bishop of Kellner, Ten Mile Creek, as toastmaster announced the presence of three speakers of state-wide reputation. He called first upon the Rev. J. J. Locke of the Congregational church, who after a witty opening remarks, Rev. Locke addressed the assembly upon the necessity and blessing of "rejoicing in the Lord." Let the joyousness of the Christian for within.

Personal liberty, the will and the won't, and the power and formation of habits, was the theme of the second speaker's discourse. To say that Prof. Jackson had a message for his audience goes without saying. Everybody knows that when Prof. Jackson faces an audience he always says something that is provocative of thought. He was at his best last night, combining wit, humor and a speaker in that entertaining way which is entirely his own.

One who has been present at every banquet for several years past is the field secretary of the state Christian Endeavor Union, the Rev. Edgar T. Farrell of Milwaukee. As the last speaker he brought a message from his friend, Mr. Charles E. Hughes, candidate for the presidency, to Moravians and Christian Endeavor of Wisconsin.

The entire banquet was a financial and spiritual success. Great credit is due the young people of the congregation for the manner in which they handle these affairs. The next banquet will be held in November, 1917.

ELKS START WORK ON MINSTREL SHOW

A meeting was held at the Elk hall on Saturday evening for the purpose of discussing the matter of holding a minstrel show this coming winter, and it was decided to hold the show, and it will be put on some time before Christmas unless something happens that is not now foreseen.

This minstrel by the Elks has been an annual event for a number of years past, and they have during this time put on some pretty good stuff, and there has never been a time when the public has not turned out in good shape and given them a hearty reception.

Art Mulroy will have charge of affairs this year, and it is safe to say that the show will be equal, if not superior, to anything that has gone before in this line. As soon as things have been lined up, regular meeting for rehearsals will be held so that everything can be handled in the best shape possible.

NEW SOCIETY TO ORGANIZE.

At the home of Mrs. McNaughton at Port Edwards tomorrow afternoon there will be organized a society to raise a fund for the French wounded. The society will include Nokosa, Port Edwards and Grand Rapids and all of the ladies of these places are invited to be present and join. Meetings will be held weekly.

NEW STREET COMMISSIONER.

At the meeting of the city council last night John Nash presented his resignation as superintendent of public works and Ed. T. McCarthy was appointed to fill the vacancy. Mr. McCarthy has been one of the assistants under Mr. Nash and will no doubt give the people good service.

Fred LaBrot has purchased a Ford Touring car the past week.

George Delap and son left this morning for Jackson county to hunt deer. Will George and John Tomczyk left today for Conrad to spend a week's deer hunting.

Mrs. J. Van Alstyne and daughter Virginia are visiting with relatives at Tomah.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. West of Albin, Canada, are visiting at the W. L. Compton home.

Mr. and Mrs. John Mosher are rejoicing over the arrival of a baby girl at their home on Nov. 4th.

Mr. and Mrs. N. Polzer of Appleton have been guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Weiland the past week.

Mrs. F. B. Warner returned on Friday from Rochester, Minn., where she had been to consult the Mayo Bros.

Mrs. Herman Stebbes of the South Side entertained a number of friends at six o'clock dinner on Friday evening.

Will Suhr has purchased the old Kellogg Bros. lumber office and moved it near his home and will remodel it into a residence.

Miss Lydia Fahrner entertained fifteen of her friends at a salmon party on Friday evening. Light refreshments were served and all report a pleasant time.

WAUSAU COMPANY BUYS STEVENS POINT PLANT

According to the Stevens Point Journal a deal has been consummated by which the Wausau company known as the Wisconsin Valley Electric company has bought the lighting plant at Stevens Point. The plant will be entirely rebuilt in the city of Stevens Point and a transmission line run down from Mosinee to connect up that city with the generators owned by the company.

The Wausau company has promised them current at the same rate that it is being sold at Wausau and Merrill, and this will be a very substantial reduction over the rate they have been paying in the past. They also promise an unlimited amount of power, and it is expected that more will be used under the new rate.

WILSON AHEAD IN RACE FOR OFFICE

While it is possible at this stage of the game to predict the election of almost anybody to the office of president and not be severely censured, still the indications are at the present time that Woodrow Wilson will be the next president of the United States.

The only states in which there was any doubt was Minnesota and California, and Wilson is ahead in one of these, the indications are that he will be re-elected. The democrats have claimed a victory for Wilson ever since Wednesday noon, and the republicans have been gradually relinquishing hope since that time.

The latest report, received at 12 o'clock states that with two thirds of the precincts heard from in California, Wilson is 450 ahead and the remaining precincts are supposed to be favorable to the democrats.

In Minnesota with 223 precincts to hear from Hughes is 445 ahead. It is claimed that either state will clinch it for Wilson.

The first claim of a republican victory was made because the eastern states, and especially New York, had gone republican. Tammany had failed to support the president and it was supposed that the way New York went was the way the country would go. That they were mistaken is cheering news to every democrat in the country outside of the Tammany ring, as this organization has for years dominated the national elections. When a president can win out against Wall street and Tammany he is really doing something out of the ordinary.

While the national ticket won out, the boys in the county did not fare so well, the republicans having made a clean sweep of the offices up at the court house. The vote in the county was as follows:

Governor	2869
Phillip Williams	2358
Phillip's majority	510
U. S. Senator	510
LaFollette	3222
Wolfe	2081
LaFollette's majority	1241
Congress	1241

Brown	3184
Kalmes	1961
Brown's majority	1223
State Senator	1223
Witter	3243
Hoehne	2015
Witter's majority	1228
Member of Assembly	1228
Whittingham	3064
Mickols	2172
Whittingham's majority	892
County Clerk	892

Church	2805
Nobles	2592
Church's majority	213
County Treasurer	213

Johnson	2987
Wheir	2337
Johnson's majority	650
Sheriff	650

Normington	3266
Beck	2219
Normington's majority	1047
Clerk of Court	1047

Bever	3269
Kraske	1986
Bever's majority	1274
District Attorney	1274

Roberts	2990
Edwards	2426
Roberts majority	564
Register of Deeds	564

Ebbe	2709

At the present writing there is still two voting precincts to hear from the towns of Carey and Hiles, but it is not expected that these will make any material difference in the final result as they are both republican towns and do not poll a very large vote.

Hughes carried the county by only 253, which with the varying results all along the line, would indicate that there was a large number of splits and that every man voted just the way he wanted to.

People who love good music will be glad to know that Max Peterson is to sing at Marshfield Wednesday evening, November 15, appearing at the Adler theatre under the auspices of a local committee of musicians.

Miss Peterson, the daughter of a Methodist minister, was born at Oak Kosh, struggled as an organist to perfect her voice and was swept into the ranks of the world's greatest singers three years ago with a signal triumph. Her grand opera returned to America in the second year of the war and has been touring the country ever since then. Her initial concert at Marshfield last February brought her a crowd of thousands. The program for next Wednesday includes a number of the simpler songs which make a universal appeal.

Will go to Appleton. Geo. P. Berkey, who has been connected with the Consolidated Water Power and Paper Co. during the past eight years, expects to move to Appleton in the near future to make his home since his election as secretary of the Interlake Paper company, as he will have the management of the plant. Mr. and Mrs. Berkey have many friends in this city who will be sorry to see them leave.

E. B. Redford, who has been cashier of the Bank of Grand Rapids, has taken Mr. Berkey's place for the present.

During the past week the Consolidated Water Power and Paper Company of this city has purchased the land, mill and other holdings of the Interlake Paper company. The mill is located at Appleton and the timber lands are situated in northern Minnesota, Wisconsin and Canada. It is stated that the purchase involved the sum of $1,500,000, although the price paid for the proposition is not given out by the interested parties.

The Interlake company manufactures sulphite, one of the essential ingredients of print and many other kinds of paper. As the local company has never owned a sulphite mill it has been necessary to buy this ingredient, which will be obtained since the new plant was bought. It is expected that the company will continue to furnish sulphite to the customers that have been patronizing it in the past.

The officers of the new company are Geo. W. Mead, president; Isaac P. Witter, vice president; Geo. P. Berkey, secretary and E. B. Redford, treasurer.

It is stated that the Appleton plant has a daily capacity of 65 tons of sulphite, which means that a number of mills can be supplied with what they want in this line, especially as paper makers have learned to be a little saving since the high prices became prevalent.

MacKINNON-JENKINS
Miss Mildred MacKinnon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Falkland MacKinnon of this city, and Mr. James Jenkins of Ashland, Ohio, were married in this city Saturday morning, Nov. 4. Rev. Rockstroff of the Episcopal church performing the service that made them man and wife.

The wedding was a quiet one, only the relatives of the contracting parties being present. The ceremony took place in the drawing room which had been decorated for the occasion in a most tasteful and artistic manner.

After the ceremony dinner was served to those present, covers being laid for thirty-six. Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins left on the noon train on their wedding tour, at the conclusion of which they will make their home at Macdonald for the coming year, where the groom is a student at the University of Wisconsin. Next spring they expect to go to Vancouver where Mr. Jenkins has a position awaiting him.

The bride is well known to our citizens, having been born and reared in this city. She is a graduate of Grafton Hall and later at St. Mary's school in New York City. She has many friends here among both old and young, and was an accomplished young lady who it was a pleasure to meet. The groom is the son of General John Jenkins and is a young man of good presence and during his time in the city has made friends of those he has come in contact with. The Tribune wishes to extend its friends in extending congratulations.

DEATH OF MRS. EMMONS
Mrs. N. E. Emmons died at her home in this city on Monday noon after an illness since the previous Tuesday. At that time she was taken with a nose bleed while on the train between this city and New Lisbon. She secured medical assistance at the time and returned to her home in this city. Her sickness was not considered dangerous at first, but it developed later that there was something decidedly wrong and later she became unconscious, and from this state she never rallied until the end came on Monday.

Deceased was born at Columbus, Wisconsin, in 1847. She was married in 1870 to N. E. Emmons and came to this city with her husband in 1871, and has since made her home here. Mr. Emmons having died about twenty years ago. The surviving members of the family are four daughters, they being Misses Celia, Ruth, Stella Emmons and Mrs. Rest Garrison. Mrs. Emmons was always a devoted Methodist and was one of the active workers in the church up to the time of her death. The funeral was held on Wednesday forenoon at the home, with services later at the church, the same being conducted by Rev. H. C. Logan.

JOHNSON-JOHNSON
The marriage of Miss Mabel Johnson, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Johnson of Saratoga to Mr. James Johnson, also of Saratoga, took place at the home of the bride's parents at ten o'clock Saturday morning, November 4, 1916. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Johnson. Rev. H. B. Johnson performed the ceremony. The service was a quiet affair, only the members of the two families being present. The Tribune wishes to extend its wishes to those of the young couple's friends, and hopes that they may live long and happily in their new home in Saratoga township.

LOCALS WIN FROM MERRILL
The Merrill football team was here on Saturday and lost to the locals by a score of 26 to 7. While the locals did not play as close a game as they have done at some of their contests, still they had no trouble in winning over their opponents, and there was no time during the game when Merrill had any chance to get the game. The score made by Merrill was just at the last end of the play when they intercepted a forward pass by our boys and made a touchdown. There was a good-sized crowd out to see the game.

WEDDING ANNOUNCEMENT

NOTICE OF APPLICATION OF FRANK VANDENBROOK FOR A PARDON

—NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN. That the undersigned Frank Vandenberg, has its logging operation on a parcel of land owned by the State of Wisconsin, and is in the process of logging the same.

AND NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN That the said Frank Vandenberg was on the 23rd day of June 1913, in the Circuit Court for Wood County, Wisconsin, convicted on his plea of guilty of the crime of rape and was sentenced for a term of 15 years in the Wisconsin State Prison.

Dated at Grand Rapids, Wisconsin, this 6th day of November, 1916.

Frank Vandenberg.
His Attorney.

EXTENSIVE LOGGING

Stevens Point Journal: The Week Lumber Co., has its logging operation well under way for the season and plans to cut more timber this winter than was cut during the season of 1915-1916. This will mean more extensive operations at the mills here during the coming summer.

The company's camps at Moon, west of Mosinee, and near Unity are now in full operation and are being well equipped with a jobber for the Stevens Point company, has also been cutting timber all summer and will continue during the winter. The company may also employ another jobber in the Mosinee district.

The Moon camp employs forty-five men and a number of teams, the log haul being a short one. William Larson is the foreman and lumberman state that the camp is an ideal one. It consists of a village of eleven timber buildings. Steel bunks with springs are furnished the men and the place is conducted according to the best methods known in modern lumber camps.

The camp near Unity is in charge of O. L. Roseth, Sr., and also employs about forty-five men. The logs cut must be hauled some distance to the company's saw at Romeo and the steam log hauler is used there.

Mr. Austin has about twenty-five men and five teams.

This year's saving totalled about 6,000,000 feet of pine, hardwood and hemlock, but the coming season will see a considerably larger cut. The proportions are expected to be about the same, 20 or 25 per cent of pine, hardwood and the remainder hemlock. The crews are now cutting and skidding the timber and as soon as snow and ice come the heavy hauling will begin.

DEATH OF EUGENE MARSEAU

Eugene Marseau, one of the old residents of the town of Rudolph, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Delphine Whitman of Stevens Point last Saturday. Deceased was 81 years of age and was one of the early settlers of Rudolph, where he lived for many years. He is survived by three sons and one daughter, being the father of Carl Marseau of Rudolph, Clement Marseau of Mosinee and Mrs. Delphine Whitman of Stevens Point.

MACHINE IS WONDERFUL INVENTION

Last week Geo. W. Paulus received a Telephone, which is, in some respects, one of the most remarkable machines in existence today, and as far as known, is the only machine of the kind in the state of Wisconsin.

The Telephone is for the purpose of reproducing sound, the same as the phonograph, gramophone and a dozen others of the same kind, but is different from all the rest in some of the essentials that go to make up the outfit. Most of the talking machines have a metallic point or some thing of the kind that scratches the record on a disc or cylinder, and then by running the disc or cylinder thru the machine again the sound is reproduced by the irregularities on the surface of the disc or roller.

The Telephone works differently, altho it produces much the same result in the end. In this machine the record is made on a fine steel wire and instead of being scratched on the surface is put into the wire by magnetism, and the result is that when the wire is run thru the machine again the sound is reproduced. There are about six miles of wire on the machine, which takes more than half an hour to run thru, and the result is that a continuous lot of conversation or music can be reproduced on the machine that will take half an hour to reproduce.

One of the most remarkable features of the machine is the fact that when it is desired to put a new record on the wire, all that is necessary is to press a lever and go ahead with the dictation, and the old record is obliterated and the new one put on in its place, there being no trace of the old one left. Another feature of the machine is that it can be hitched on to an ordinary telephone by the simple insertion of a plug, and any conversation that takes place over the line is permanently recorded by the machine, both sides of the conversation being taken down.

The machine is used more especially for dictation than anything else, as it is very easy to make a record and there are no changes to make from recording to reproducing. By installing wires records on the machine can be made from any part of the building, the machine remaining in the one place where it is handy to the stenographer who is transcribing the notes.

Mr. Paulus has taken the state agency for the machine and will be pleased to exhibit it to any person who may be interested in it.

POTATOES SELL FOR $2

Wausau, Nov. 6.—James Stovick bought 700 bushels of Triumph potatoes from E. Mikkelsen $2 per bushel, or $1400. The stock is extra fancy, and the price is the highest paid here at any time. Mikkelsen has the reputation of raising the largest number of potatoes on an acre and always has exceptionally good stock.

Potatoes are quite plentiful here while a great deal of the stock is still in the hands of the farmers, several cars will be shipped to the market at top prices, greets the grower. Platten Produce Co. of Green Bay are loading a car of rutabagas. Owing to the high price of potatoes these are in good demand.

JOLLIFICATION BANQUET

The Christian Endeavor society of the First Moravian church pulled off its annual Dollar Banquet at the church parlors last evening. That the affair has grown to be important is shown by the fact that altho the banquet costs the banqueters a dollar a plate, more than one hundred plates were laid.

As usual the young people of the society outdid themselves in the matter of decoration and menu. The overhead decorations were mainly of princess pine and bittersweet berries. Potted plants graced the tables, and chrysanthemums filled in various nooks and corners. Not only was the menu well arranged and planned, but also very daintily and prettily served.

Between the courses various musical numbers were rendered by Miss Esther Witte, Fullback Grignon, Ben and Edward Anderson, Frank Nuehlstein and Rev. H. B. Johnson. Every number was graciously received and heartily applauded. At the conclusion of the banquet, the pastor of the congregation, the Rev. C. H. Mellicke, bishop of Kellner and Ten Mile Creek, as toastmaster announced the presence of three speakers of state-wide reputation. He called first upon the Rev. R. J. Locke of the Congregational church. After a few witty opening remarks Rev. Locke addressed the assembly upon the necessity and blessing of "rejoicing in the Lord." Let the thousands of Christians who have a testimony of the Christian joy within.

Personal liberty, the will and the won't, and the power and formation of habits, was the theme of the second speaker's discourse. To say that Prof. Jackson had a message for the audience goes without saying. Everybody knows that when Prof. Jackson faces an audience he always says something that is provocative of thought. He was at his best last night, combining wit, humor and philosophy in that entertaining way which is entirely his own.

One who has been present at every banquet for several years past is the state secretary of the Christian Endeavor Union, the Rev. Edgar T. Farrell of Milwaukee. As the last speaker he brought a message from his friend, Mr. Charles E. Hughes, candidate for the presidency of the United States, and a message from the Congregational church of Wisconsin.

The entire banquet was a financial and spiritual success. Great credit is due the young people of this enterprising congregation for the manner in which they handle these affairs. The next banquet will be held in November, 1917.

Will Suhr has purchased the old Kellogg Bros lumber office and moved it near his home and will remodel it into a residence.

Miss Lydia Fahrner entertained fifteen of her friends at a salmagundi party on Friday evening. Light refreshments were served and all report a pleasant time.

The first claim of a republican victory was made because the eastern states, and especially New York, had gone republican. Tammany had failed to support the president and it was supposed that the way New York went was the way the country would go. That they were mistaken is cheering news to every democrat in the country outside of the Tammany ring, as this organization has for years dominated the national politics.

While the national ticket won out, the boys in the country did not fare so well, the republicans having made a clean sweep of the offices up to the court house. The vote in the county was as follows:

Governor	2869
Williams	2358
Philipp's majority	516
U. S. Senator	3222
LaFollette	2081
LaFollette's majority	1241

At the present writing there is still two voting precincts to hear from the towns of Carey and Miles, but it is not expected that these will make any material difference in the results of the election. Heretofore the towns and do not poll a very large vote.

Hughes carried the county by only 253, which with the varying results all along the line, would indicate that there were a large number of splits and that every man voted just the way he wanted to.

MISS PETERSON AT MARSHFIELD

People who love good music will be glad to know that May Peterson is to sing at Marshfield Wednesday evening, November 15, appearing at the Adler theater under the auspices of a local committee of musicians.

Miss Peterson, the daughter of a Methodist minister, was born at Oshkosh, struggled as an organist to perfect her voice and was swept into the ranks of the world's greatest singers three years ago with a signal triumph in grand opera at the Opera Comique, Paris. She returned to America in the second year of the war and has been touring the country ever since then. Her initial concert at Marshfield last February brought her a crowded house. The program for next Wednesday includes a number of the simpler songs which make a universal appeal.

WILL GO TO APPLETON.

Geo. P. Berkey, who has been connected with the Consolidated Water Power and Paper Co., during the past eight years, expects to move to Appleton in the near future to make his home since his election as secretary of the Interlake Paper company, as he will have the management of that plant. Mr. Berkey has many friends in this city who will be sorry to see them leave.

E. B. Redford, who has been cashier of the Bank of Grand Rapids, has taken Mr. Berkey's place for the present.

LOCALS WIN FROM MERRILL

The Merrill football team was here on Saturday and lost to the locals by a score of 26 to 7. While the locals did not play as close a game as they have done at some of their contests, still they had no trouble in winning the game. The score was 26 to 7. There was no time during the game when Merrill had any chance to get the game. The score made by Merrill was just at the last end of the play when they were overpowered by the locals. There was a good-sized crowd out to see the game.

MILLION DOLLAR DEAL GOES THROUGH

During the past week the consolidated Water Power and Paper company of this city has purchased of the Interlake Paper company, the plant located at Appleton and the timber lands are situated in northern Wisconsin, Wisconsin and Canada. It is stated that the purchase involved the sum of $1,500,000, the price paid for the proposition is not given out by the interested parties.

The Interlake company manufactures sulphur, one of the principal ingredients of paint and other products. The company has never owned a sulphur mine. It has been necessary to buy this material, which will be obtained from the new plant being bought.

It is stated that the company will continue to furnish sulphur to the customers that have been patronizing it in the past.

The officers of the new company are: W. M. Mead, president; Geo. P. Witter, vice president; Geo. P. Berkey, secretary and E. B. Redford, treasurer.

It is stated that the Appleton plant has a daily capacity of 100,000 pounds of sulphur, which is a number of mills can be supplied with what they want in this line, especially as paper makers have learned to be a true saving since the high prices became prevalent.

McKINNON-JENKINS

Miss Mildred McKinnon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick McKinnon of this city, and Mr. James Jenkins of Ashland, were married at this city Saturday morning. Rev. Rockstroff of the Episcopal church performed the service that made them man and wife.

The wedding was a quiet one, only the relatives of the contracting parties being present. The ceremony took place in the drawing room which had been decorated for the occasion in a most tasteful and artistic manner.

After the ceremony dinner was served to those present, covers being laid for thirty-six. Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins left on the noon train on their wedding tour, the bride and groom will make their home at Madison for the coming year, where the groom is a student at the University of Wisconsin. Next spring they expect to go to Vancouver where Mr. Jenkins has a position awaiting him.

The bride is well known to our citizens, having been born and reared in this city. She is a graduate of Grafton Hall and later at St. Mary's school, St. Mary's, Wis. She has many friends here among both old and young, and was an accomplished young lady whom it was a pleasure to meet. The groom is a son of General J. H. Jenkins, a well known man of good presence and during his time in the city has made friends of those he has come in contact with. The Tribune wishes with their many friends in extending congratulations.

DEATH OF MRS. EMMONS

Mrs. N. E. Emmons died at her home in this city on Monday noon after an illness since the previous Tuesday. At that time she was taken with a nose bleed while on the train between this city and New Lisbon. She secured medical assistance at the time and returned to her home in this city. Her sickness was a long one, and she was unable to get on her feet. She developed later that there was something decidedly wrong and later she became unconscious, and from this state she never rallied until the end came on Monday.

Deceased was born at Columbus, Wisconsin, in 1847. She was married in 1870 to N. E. Emmons and came to this city with her husband in 1871, and has since made her home here. Mr. Emmons having died about twenty years ago. The surviving members of the family are four daughters, they being Misses G. H. Reth and Stella Emmons and Mrs. Rest Garrison. Mrs. Emmons has always been a devoted Methodist and was one of the active workers in the church up to the time of her death.

The funeral was held on Wednesday forenoon from the home, with services later at the church, same being conducted by Rev. H. C. Logan.

STATE AID ROADS TOTAL 4,850 MILES

FUND OF $4,171,094 HELPED TO CONSTRUCT 1,158 MILES
THIS YEAR.

TO ADD 1,300 MILES IN 1917

Chief Highway Engineer Hirst Reports There Will Be $4,500,000
Available for This Purpose
the Coming Year.

Madison—The attorney general was advised that Judge E. C. Hildebrand of La Crosse had ruled in the case of the State of Wisconsin against Louis Schotten, a saloon keeper in the village of Norwalk, Monroe county, that when a municipality, which has more than the ratio of saloons allowed under the Baker law, votes dry and the following year votes wet, the municipality loses its right to have more saloons than one to every 500 population or fraction thereof.

The village of Norwalk, which has a population of 502, in 1915 had three saloons. In that year the village voted dry. This year the village voted again to grant saloon licenses, and the trustees issued three such licenses.

One of the licenses was issued to Schotten, and the state made an action to make him a public nuisance.
Judge Hildebrand, after hearing the case at Sparta, sent a written decision to the attorney general sustaining the contention of the state that the village having voted dry lost the privilege of granting more saloon licenses than one to 500 population or fraction thereof.

This is the first time that the courts
had passed on the particular question raised in this case. The decision is expected to affect a number of other municipalities in the state.

The mileage added during the last summer, and now being completed, gives Wisconsin a total of 4,850 miles
of state aid highway built during the last five years, during which the highway commission has been in existence.
During 1917 it is expected that 1,300
miles will be added as there will be some $4,500,000 available for this purpose, according to Chief Highway Engineer Hirst.

Of the 1,158 miles of road built about 35 per cent was graded only and not surfaced. There is added 215.60 miles of stone and macadam road, 59.01 miles of concrete road, and about 300 miles of crushed gravel and split run gravel road. Up in Florence county five miles of iron ore road was constructed. Sixteen miles of concrete road was built in Outagamie county. Two miles of asphalt road was constructed in Milwaukee county.

In addition to the state aid bridges constructed by the state and townships, there were 433 new bridges
built by the counties at a cost of $464,- 670. The state does not pay anything for these bridges.

WILL PROBE WORKING HOURS

Complaint Against Soo Yards at Neenah-Menasha to Result in Investigation.

Madison—A statewide investigation of hours and conditions of labor for railroad switchmen may result from the hearing to be held by the railroad commission on Nov. 9 in the case of the complaint of the E. R. Knowlton lodge, No. 357, of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, against conditions existing in the Soo yards at Neenah
and Menasha.

It is charged in the complaint by the railroad men that there are only two crews of two men each employed in the Neenah-Menasha yards and that this is insufficient to protect life, health and safety of the men and the public.

The state law provides that it is unlawful for railroads to permit unreasonable employment of switching crews in yards in both the point of hours and conditions of labor. There is no specific time qualification, but
the commission can read this into the law under the "unreasonable" clause.
All railroads operating in the state will watch this case closely as the same conditions are alleged to exist in almost every city of any size in the state.

Car Kills Janesville Citizen.
Janesville—Owen L. Baldwin, 67
years old, prominent and long time
resident of Janesville and Rock county was struck and killed by a city street car while walking on the trolley tracks
in a narrow road in the south portion of the city. He recently had disposed of his property and intended to go south to spend the rest of his days
with his aged wife.

Want Smaller Nets.
Green Bay—Fishermen on Green
Bay want meshes of gill nets reduced from 2 1/2 inches to 2 inches. The Wisconsin Fishermen's Protective association in meeting here requested
the state game and fish commission to get this reform from the legislature
and elected the following officers:
President John Barlament; secretary,
L. G. Schiller; treasurer, John Kotter.

State Treasury Has Big Balance.
Madison—The treasury of Wisconsin is well supplied with funds, according to the report filed by State Treasurer
Johnson with Gov. Philipp. The report shows that there is a balance of $2,382,424.50 in all funds and in the general fund $1,760,944.02.

Turkeys Scarce and High.
Neenah—It is predicted that turkeys will bring 30 cents a pound Thanksgiving time. Raffles held in the rural districts during the last few weeks
have drained the market and poultry dealers will find it difficult to fill their regular orders.

Chief Gets Black Hand Note.
Ashland—"If you want your life, leave $500 under the Commercial lock." This warning, signed by
"Ralph Barstow," and several skulls and crossbones, was received by Chief of Police W. T. Blair.

Wanta New Peace Tribunal.
Oshkosh—David Starr Jordan, noted educator, scientist, and author, in a lecture here urged establishment of a remodeled Hague tribunal after the European war is ended.

Ships 6,008,257 Tons Ore.
Ashland—During October, the Chicago and North Western railroad shipped from its two docks here 1,- 059,488 tons of ore. The total shipments for the season to date are 6,- 008,257 tons.

Farmer Injured By Saw.
Marinette—While sawing wood with a machine, August Bettcher, Marinette county farmer, accidentally slipped against the revolving circular saw and his right arm was nearly severed.

Three Aged Women Die.
Manitowish—Within twenty-four hours three well known women died here. They were: Mrs. Agnes Laura Peters, aged 84; Mrs. Emma Rathschke, aged 87, and Mrs. Louis Heyroth, 95
years old.

Install New Pastor.
Wausau—The Rev. Frederick Forster, pastor of the Trinity Lutheran church here, succeeding the Rev. J. D. De-tmon, who was called to Iowa.

IMPORTANT CASE DECIDED

Judge Hildebrand of La Crosse Rules in

VICTIM KILLS HOLD-UP MAN

Green Bay Citizens Organize to Provide $200 Thanksgiving Feast
for Men in Texas.

Green Bay—"Give the Green Bay troops a good feed Thanksgiving," is the slogan adopted by a committee of local men who are seeking to raise a fund to send to Texas, to members of militia companies from Green Bay. A committee has been organized, and will endeavor to get enough money to provide a dinner for the eighty Green
Bay soldiers in Texas.

Subscriptions of any amount, from 1 cent up, are being taken, and it is proposed to get at least $200 with which to buy a "Thanksgiving dinner," to be served in the supply company mess room on Nov. 24. Permission has been given by the city authorities to solicit funds for the soldiers.

When a sufficient amount has been collected, the money will be sent to Texas. All the boys from Green Bay
whether in the supply company, Ocon-to, Marinette, Appleton or Manitowish companies, will be invited to the dinner.

TURKEYS FOR THE SOLDIERS
Thug Is Shot With Own Revolver and Dies Shortly Afterward Without Revealing Identity.

Madison—After being shot and fatally wounded with his own revolver as a result of a desperate fight with one of the two men he attempted to hold up on the west side of the city a highwayman, aged about 30 years, died shortly afterward at a hospital without revealing his identity.

George Sibodo, one of the two men attacked by the stranger, was being relieved of his valuables when his companion, Steve Rondone, grappled with the robber and after a desperate struggle, secured the revolver. The holdup man then took flight with Ron-done in close pursuit. Rondone fired four shots, hitting the robber just below the heart.

A laundry man in the robber's shirt gives the name of "Clancy" and most of the man's clothing bears the stamp
of Milwaukee merchants.

Identify Slain Man as Gambler.
Beloit—The dead man found in the Rock river, near here, by hunters, has been partially identified as Wes White of Spring Green, well known in the western part of the state as a gambler. Beloit police are of the opinion that the man was slain for revenge
as a sequel to a card game on the bank of the river. Two hundred dollars in bills concealed in the man's clothing disprove any robbery theories.

Boys Tip Tombstones.
Marinette—Marinette police are seeking a number of young men who entered the Woodlawn cemetery here on Halloween night and overturned
five tombstones.

To Double Shoe Output.
Beloit—The Foster Shoe company
will increase its annual output from 100,000 to 200,000 pairs of women's shoes.

Forty-three Lose Tonels.
Green Bay—Of the 300 boys and girls in St. Joseph's orphan asylum here, Dr. H. P. Rhode discovered that forty-three needed operations for removal of tonsils.

Creamery Pays $41,389.
Barron—During the month of October, the Barron creamery, one of the largest in the country, paid $41,389 to cream patrons, paying an average price of 38 cents for 371,613 pounds of cream from which 108,919.8 pounds of butter fat were obtained.

To Hold Egg Institute.
Omro—An egg institute will be held here Nov. 9 and 10 as part of the annual show of the Winnebago County
Poultry association, Nov. 8 to 11.

Seek Runaway Boy.
Chilton—Police throughout the state
have been asked by Sheriff William Hurst to look for Joseph Mueller, 13
years old, who disappeared from home
on Oct. 21. He is 4 feet 9 inches tall, has medium brown hair and weighs about 100 pounds.

Loses Fifty Hogs.
Rice Lake—H. Jewett lost fifty pur-bred Duroc Jersey hogs by the epidemic of hog cholera which is being gotten under control now.

Pays $20 for Three Ducks.
Oshkosh—Shooting ducks in open water proved expensive sport for John Wiley. Pleading guilty in Municipal court, he paid a fine of $5 and costs, and additional $5 for each of three ducks shot.

Horse Hunting Good.
Rice Lake—L. W. Walker of Angus, Frank Morin of Mikawa and Herman Heldst of Rice Lake all have sustained losses by hunters shooting their horses.

WISCONSIN TROOPS ARE REAL SOLDIERS

THE WAR BUSINESS IN COTTON FIELDS.

SHOW EFFECT OF TRAINING

Take Field Five Days a Week for Sham Battles and Battle Formations—Praised by Army Officers.

San Antonio, Tex.—Destined to become the flower of the national guard,
the Wisconsin troops as the result of their long stay at Camp Wilson are real soldiers. The three Wisconsin regiments, under Gen. L. Richardson, are showing the effects of military training, and bring the highest praise from experienced army officers.

They showed to especial advantage in the recent brigade review held on the lower parade of Fort Sam Houston, which was the first review in which the men from the Badger state took part. Maj. Gen. Frederick Funston, with Gen. Henry Greene, commanding the Twelfth provisional division, viewed the spectacle. "With an army of men like these we will be prepared to meet any emergency," said Gen. Funston.

"They are a credit to the service, and would give a good account of themselves at any time. If they could see themselves as others see them they would feel doubly proud of the privilege of wearing a khaki uniform as defenders of their flag and country.

Wisconsin has nothing to feel ashamed
of in the quality of men who represent
the Badger state at Camp Wilson."

Tramping down cotton fields, digging trenches and building up defenses with cotton stalks are included
among the daily diversions of the men in the learning of the war game. With the cotton picking season over, acres
of unused land are placed at the disposal of the United States army for regular military drills and planing time rolls around, which will be about the beginning of the year. Except for Saturdays and Sundays the men take the field every day for sham battles
and battle formations.

Between battles the men put in their time playing football or boxing in the company street.

STATE DEATH RATE IS HIGH

Excessive Heat and Other Unusual
Causes During Summer Months
Boost Mortality Rate.

Madison—Excessive heat and other unusual causes contributed to a high mortality in Wisconsin during the third quarter of this year. Decease in July, August and September, according to the report, totaled 6,852. This was 1,100 more than in the corresponding period last year. The death rate was 10.8 per cent per 1,000 population, as against 9.2 for the same months last year. Heat prostrations alone caused 229 deaths. There were 138 drownings and thirty-three deaths from infantile paralysis.

Plan Electric Extension.
Stevens Point—The Wisconsin Valley Electric company is taking steps to have space for 150 carloads of food products to this city and will lay the matter before the rate commission.

The company plans ultimately to extend its Wausau electric railway to this city and possibly to Grand Rapids.

To Erect $80,000 Storehouse.
Green Bay—Plans for a storehouse to cost $80,000, exclusive of machinery and installation, have been announced by the Green Bay electric company. It will be 50x100 feet in dimension, will have space for 150 carloads of food products and will be five stories high with provision for five additional stories.

Disco Postmaster Appointed.
Washington—Willard B. Potter was appointed postmaster of Disco, Jackson county, Les Letson, resigned.
Rural delivery route will be started on
Jan. 2 at Waneau, Marathon county.
The length will be twenty-two miles
and families to be served, 150.

First Marshal Dies.
La Crosse—John Condy, 70 years old, first city marshal of La Crosse,
died here following an attack of heart trouble while eating dinner. Condy was one of La Crosse's oldest settlers.

Ships Nine Cars of Cheese.
Neenah—A shipment of 3,700 pounds
of cheese has been sent from Neenah to English army headquarters. It is part of a consignment of nine carloads, valued at $50,000.

Organize Big Tractor Company.
La Crosse—The largest business

FOR COAL PRICES.

Suits Filed in U. S. Court to Have Cars Returned to Home Systems.

Chicago, Nov. 3.—Two suits were filed in the United States district court here on Wednesday which may result in the increasing or lowering
of the price of coal to the consumer.
The filing of the suits reveals a shippers' and carriers' war.

The defendants in both suits are the Atchafalaya, Topoka & Santa Fe and 141 other railroad companies, and their receivers.

The plaintiffs in one suit are the Clinton Coal company and ten other coal companies, and in the other the Ayrault Coal company and 16 other coal companies.

The Clinton suit is a bill in equity
for an injunction requiring the return of local cars to the Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad for service of mines along the road. The Ayrault suit is similar, except that it asks the return of cars to the rolls of the Chicago, Terre Haute & Southern railway. Both bills are identical except for the names.

The bills set up that the defendant railroad companies have failed and refused to return coal cars to the proper lines; that cars have been wrongfully diverted and misused and confiscated,
and asks that a restraining order be immediately issued, followed by a pre-

VILLISTAS KILL 29 ON TRAIN

Carranza Soldiers Acting as Guard Are Executed—Passengers Lined
Up and Robbed.

Chihuahua, Mex., Nov. 4.—Vil-listas who held up and looted a passenger train from Juarez at Laguna, 50 miles north of here, took off and executed 29 Carranza soldiers who were acting as a guard for the train.
The passengers were lined up outside of the coaches and robbed and the train was looted of all supplies which it carried. All passengers were compelled to strip by the bandits, who carried away all their clothing. The passengers included a number of women.

JURY ACQUITS JOHN COPELAND

Reports After Deliberating for Eighty-

Galveston, Tex., Nov. 3.—John Copeland, charged with the killing of William Black, an anti-Catholic lecturer, was found not guilty by a jury in the district court here on Wednesday. The jury returned after deliberating 84 hours. Black was killed at Marshall, Tex., February 8, 1915. Black was killed in a hotel at Marshall while Copoland, who was bank cashier of that place, and other men were culling on him in his room to cease his lectures in Marshall.

STATE AID ROADS TOTAL 4,850 MILES

FUND OF $4,171,094 HELPED TO
THIS YEAR.

Chief Highway Engineer First Reports There Will Be $4,500,000
Available for This Purpose
the Coming Year.

Madison—State aid during the last year has helped to build 1,158.75 miles of road in Wisconsin at a total cost of $5,621,026.28, and 353 bridges at a cost of $549,068.11. The total amount spent by the state on such improvements is $4,171,094.39, which is about the same as was expended in 1915.

The mileage added during the last summer, and now being completed,
gives Wisconsin a total of 4,850 miles
of state aid highway built during the last five years, during which the highway commission has been in existence.
During 1917 it is expected that 1,300
miles will be added as there will be
some $4,500,000 available for this purpose, according to Chief Highway Engineer Hirst.

Of the 1,158 miles of road built
about 35 per cent was graded only and not surfaced. There is added 215.60 miles of stone and macadam road, and 59.01 miles of concrete road, and
about 300 miles of crushed gravel and pit run gravel road. Up in Florence county five miles of iron ore road was constructed. Sixteen miles of concrete road was built in Outagamie
county. Two miles of asphalt road was constructed in Milwaukee city.
In addition to the state aid bridges
constructed by the state and townships, there were 432 new bridges
built by the counties at a cost of $464,- 670. The state does not pay anything
for these bridges.

WILL PROBE WORKING HOURS

Complaint Against Soo Yards at Neenah-Menasha to Result in Investigation.

Madison—A statewide investigation
of hours and conditions of labor for railroad switchmen may result from
the hearing to be held by the railroad commission on Nov. 9 in the case of the complaint of the E. R. Knowlton lodge, No. 357, of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, against conditions
existing in the Soo yards at Neenah
and Menasha.

It is charged in the complaint by
the railroad men that there are only
two crews of two men each employed in the Neenah-Menasha yards and that this is insufficient to protect life,
health and safety of the men and the public.

The state law provides that it is unlawful for employers to permit unreasonable employment of switching
crews in yards in both the point of
is no specific time qualification, but
the commission can read this into the
law under the "unreasonable" clause.
All railroads operating in the state
will watch this case closely as the same conditions are alleged to exist
in almost every city of any size in the state.

Car Kills Janesville Citizen.
Janesville—Owen L. Baldwin, 67
years old, prominent and long time
resident of Janesville and Rock county
was struck and killed by a city street
car while walking on the trolley tracks
in a narrow road in the south portion of the city. He recently had disposed
of his property and intended to go
south to spend the rest of his days
with his aged wife.

Want Smaller Nets.
Green Bay—Fishermen on Green
Bay want meshes of gill nets reduced
from 2 1/2 inches to 2 inches. The Wisconsin Fishermen's Protective association in meeting here requested
the state game and fish commission to get this reform from the legislature
and elected the following officers:
President John Barlament; secretary,
L. G. Schiller; treasurer, John Ketter.

State Treasury Has Big Balance.
Madison—The treasury of Wisconsin
is well supplied with funds, according to the report filed by State Treasurer
Johnson with Gov. Philipp. The report shows that there is a balance of $2,932,424.30 in all funds and in the general fund $1,760,944.02.

Turkeys Scarce and High.
Neenah—It is predicted that turkeys will bring 30 cents a pound Thanksgiving time. Raffles held in the rural districts during the last few weeks
have drained the market and poultry dealers will find it difficult to fill their regular orders.

Chief Gets Black Hand Note.
Ashland—If you want your life, tear $500 under the Commercial lock. This warning, signed by
"Ralph Barstow," and several skulls
and crossbones, was received by Chief of Police W. T. Blair.

Wants New Peace Tribunal.
Oshkosh—David Starr Jordan, noted
educator, scientist, and author, in a lecture here urged establishment of a remodeled Hague tribunal after the European war is ended.

Ships 6,008,257 Tons Ore.
Ashland—During October, the Chicago and North-Western railroad shipped from its Lake shore 1, 659,488 tons of ore. The total shipments for the season to date are 6, 008,257 tons.

Farmer Injured By Saw.
Marquette—While sawing wood with a machine, August Bettcher, Marquette county farmer, accidentally slipped and the revolving circular saw and his right arm was nearly severed.

Three Aged Women Die.
Manitowish—Within twenty-four hours three well known women died
here. They were: Mrs. Emma Laura Fehrs, aged 84; Mrs. Agnes Rathschak, aged 67, and Mrs. Louis Heyroth, 95
years old.

Install New Pastor.
Waubesa—The Rev. Frederick Forster, Albain, Mo., has been installed as pastor of the Trinity Lutheran church here, succeeding the Rev. J. D. Dentation, who was called to Iowa.

IMPORTANT CASE DECIDED

Judge Higbee of La Crosse Rules in Favor of the State in Saloon Test Case.

Madison—The attorney general was advised that Judge E. C. Higbee of La Crosse had ruled in the case of the State of Wisconsin against Louis
Scholten, a saloon keeper in the village of Norwalk, Monroe county, that when a municipality, which has more than the ratio of saloons allowed under
the Baker law, votes dry and the following year votes wet, the municipality loses its right to have more saloons
than one to every 500 population or fraction thereof.

The village of Norwalk, which has a population of 1,915, had three saloons. In last year the village voted dry. This year the village voted again to grant saloon licenses, and the trustees issued three such licenses.
One of the licenses was issued to Scholten, and the state made an action to debate his license as a public nuisance.
Judge Higbee, after hearing the case
at Sparta, sent a written decision to
the attorney general sustaining the contention of the state that the village
having voted dry lost the privilege of
granting more saloon licenses than one to 500 population or fraction thereof.

This is the first time that the courts
had passed on the particular question raised in this case. The decision is expected to affect a number of other mu-

VICTIM KILLS HOLD-UP MAN

Green Bay Citizens Organize to Provide $200 Thanksgiving Feast
for Men in Texas.

Green Bay—"Give the Green Bay
troops a good feed Thanksgiving," is
the slogan adopted by a committee of local men who are seeking to raise a fund to send to Texas, to members of militia companies from Green Bay. A committee has been organized, and
will endeavor to get enough money to provide a dinner for the eighty Green
Bay soldiers in Texas.

Subscriptions of any amount, from 1 cent up, are being taken. It is proposed to get at least $200 with which to buy a "regular" Thanksgiving dinner, to be served in the supply company mess room on Turkey day. Permission has been given to the committee by the city authorities to solicit funds
for the soldiers.

When a sufficient amount has been collected, the money will be sent to Texas. All the boys from Green Bay,
whether in the supply company, Ocon-
to, Marinette, Appleton or Manitowish companies, will be invited to the dinner.

TURKEYS FOR THE SOLDIERS

Thug Is Shot With Own Revolver and Dies Shortly Afterward Without Revealing Identity.

Racine—After being shot and fatally wounded with his own revolver as a result of a desperate fight with one of the two men he attempted to hold up on the west side of the city, a highwayman, aged about 30 years, died a short time afterward at a hospital without revealing his identity.

George Sibido, one of the two men attacked by the stranger, was being relieved of his valuables when his companion, Steve Rondone, grappled
with the robber and after a desperate struggle, secured the revolver. The holdup man then took flight with Ron-done in close pursuit. Rondone fired four shots hitting the robber just before the heart.

A laundry mark in the robber's shirt gives the name of "Clancy" and most of the man's clothing bears the stamp
of Milwaukee merchants.

Identify Slain Man as Gambler.
Beloit—The dead man found in the Rock river, near here, by hunters, has been positively identified as "Vic"
White of Spring Green, well known in the western part of the state as a gambler. Beloit police are of the opinion that the man was slain for revenge
as a sequel to a card game on the bank of the river. Two hundred dollars in bills concealed in the man's clothing displays any robbery theories.

Boys Tip Tombstones.
Marinette—Marinette police are seeking a number of young men here on Halloween night and overturned
five tombstones.

To Double Shoe Output.
Beloit—The Foster Shoe company
will increase its annual output from 100,000 to 200,000 pairs of women's shoes.

Forty-three Lose Tonsils.
Green Bay—Of the 300 boys and girls in St. Joseph's orphan asylum
here, Dr. H. P. Rhode discovered that forty-three needed operations for removal of tonsils.

Creamery Pays $41,383.
Barron—During the month of October, the Barron creamery, one of the largest in the country, paid $41,383 to
cream patrons, paying an average price of 38 cents for 371,613 pounds of cream from which 108,919.8 pounds of butter fat were obtained.

To Hold Egg Institute.
Omro—An egg institute will be held here on Nov. 9 and 10 as part of the annual show of the Winnebago County
Poultry association, Nov. 8 to 11.

Seek Runaway Boy.
Chilton—Police throughout the state
have been asked by Sheriff William Hurst to look for Joseph Mueller, 13
years old, who disappeared from home
on Oct. 21. He is 4 feet 9 inches tall, has medium brown hair and weighs
about 100 pounds.

Loses Fifty Hogs.
Rice Lake—H. Jewett lost fifty pure bred Duroc-Jersey hogs by the epidemic of hog cholera which is being gotten under control now.

Pays $20 for Three Ducks.
Oshkosh—Shooting ducks in open water proved expensive sport for John Wiley. Pleading guilty in Municipal court, he paid a fine of $5 and costs, and additional $5 for each of three ducks shot.

Horse Hunting Good.
Rice Lake—L. W. Welker of Angus, Frank Morkin of Milwaukee and Herman Heldstad of Rice Lake all have sustained losses by hunters shooting their horses.

WISCONSIN TROOPS ARE REAL SOLDIERS

THE WAR BUSINESS IN COTTON FIELDS.

SHOW EFFECT OF TRAINING

Take Field Five Days a Week for Sham Battles and Battle Formations—Practiced by Army Officers.

San Antonio, Tex.—Destined to become the flower of the national guard,
the Wisconsin troops as the result of their long stay at Camp Wilson are
regiments, under Gen. L. T. Richardson, are showing the effects of military training, and bring the highest praise from experienced army officers.
They showed to especial advantage in the recent brigade review held on the lower parade of Fort Sam Houston,
which was the first review in which
the men from the Badger state took part. Maj. Gen. Frederick Funston,
with Gen. Henry Greene, commanding
the Twelfth provisional division, viewed the spectacle. "With an army of men like these we will be prepared to meet any emergency," said Gen. Funston.

"They are a credit to the service, and
would give a good account of themselves at any time. If they could see themselves as others see them they would feel doubly proud of the privilege of wearing a khaki uniform as defenders of their flag and country.
Wisconsin has nothing to feel ashamed
of in the quality of men who represent
the Badger state at Camp Wilson."

Tramping down cotton fields, digging trenches and building up defenses with cotton stalks are included
among the daily diversions of the men in the learning of the war game. With the cotton picking season over, acres
of unused land are placed at the disposal of the United States army for maneuver purposes until planting time rolls around, which will be about the beginning of the year. Except for Saturdays and Sundays the men take
the field every day for sham battles
and battle formations.

Between battles the men put in their time playing football or boxing in
the company street.

STATE DEATH RATE IS HIGH

Excessive Heat and Other Unusual
Causes During Summer Months
Boost Mortality Rate.

Madison—Excessive heat and other unusual causes contributed to a high mortality in Wisconsin during the third quarter of this year. Deaths in July, August and September, according to the report, totaled 6,562. This was 1,100 more than in the corresponding period last year. The death rate was 10.8 per cent per 1,000 population, as against 9.2 for the same months last year. Heat prostrations alone caused 229 deaths. There were 138 drownings and thirty-three deaths from infantile paralysis.

Plan Electric Extension.

Stevens Point—The Wisconsin Valley Electric company is taking steps to extend its electric power lines from Wausau to this city and will lay the matter before the rate commission.
The company plans ultimately to extend its Wausau electric railway to this city and possibly to Grand Rapids.

To Erect $60,000 Storehouse.

Green Bay—Plans for a storehouse to cost $60,000, exclusive of machinery and installation, have been announced by the Green Bay Cheese company. It will be 50x100 feet in dimension, will have space for 150 carloads of food products and will be five stories high with provision for five additional stories.

Disco Postmaster Appointed.

Washington—Willard B. Potter was appointed postmaster of Disco, Jackson county, Lee Letson, resigned.
Rural delivery route will be started on
Jan. 2 at Wausau, Marathon county.
The length will be twenty-two miles
and families to be served, 150.

First Marshal Dies.

La Crosse—John Coady, 79 years old, first city marshal of La Crosse,
died here following an attack of heart trouble while eating dinner. Coady was one of La Crosse's oldest settlers.

Ships Nine Cars of Cheese.

Neenah—A shipment of 3,700 pounds
of cheese has been sent from Neenah
to English army headquarters. It is part of a consignment of nine carloads,
valued at $50,000.

Suits Filed in U. S. Court to Have Cars Returned to Home Countries.

Chicago, Nov. 3.—Two suits were filed in the United States district court here on Wednesday which may result in the increasing or lowering
of the price of coal to the consumer.
The filing of the suits reveals a ship-
pers' and carriers' war.

The defendants in both suits are the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe and 141 other railroad companies, and their receivers.

The plaintiffs in one suit are the Clinton coal company and ten other
coal companies and in the other the Ayrault coal company and 19 other
coal companies.

The Clinton suit is a bill in equity
for an injunction requiring the return
of local cars to the Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad for service of mines
along the road. The Ayrault suit is similar, except that it asks the return of cars to the mills of the Chicago,
Terre Haute & Southern railway. Both bills are identical except for the names.

The bills set up that the defendant railroad companies have failed and refused to return cars to the proper lines; that cars have been wrongfully diverted and misused and confiscated,
and asks that a restraining order be immediately issued, followed by a preliminary injunction against the roads.

VILLISTAS KILL 29 ON TRAIN

Carranza Soldiers Acting as Guard Are Executed—Passengers Lined
Up and Robbed.

Chihuahua City, Mex., Nov. 4.—Vil-listas who held up and looted a passenger train from Juarez at Laguna,
50 miles north of here, took off and executed 29 Carranza soldiers who were acting as a guard for the train.
The passengers were lined up outside of the coaches and robbed of all their valuables. All passengers were compelled to strip by the bandits, who carried away all their clothing. The passengers included a number of women.

JURY ACQUITS JOHN COPELAND

Reports After Deliberating for Eighty-four Hours—Was Accused of Slay-ing Anti-Catholic Lecturer.

Galveston, Tex., Nov. 3.—John Cope-
land, charged with the killing of William Black, an anti-Catholic lecturer, and a man were tried in a jury in the district court here on Wednesday. The jury reported after deliberating 84
hours. Black was killed at Marshall, Tex., February 3, 1915. Black was killed in a hotel at Marshall while Copoland, who was bank cashier of that place, and other men were calling on him in his room to cease his lectures in Marshall.

Three Die, Two Hurt in Fire.

Philadelphia, Nov. 4.—Two women and a man were killed in a fire which destroyed the third floor of an apartment building here. The dead are:
Charles McNeary, his mother, and Mrs.
Nellie Howard.

Aeroplanes Fly to Bucharest.

Bucharest, Nov. 4.—Five aeroplanes have just arrived here from the allied base on the Isle of Imbros to protect the city from German air raiders. The allied aviators flew all the way across the Balkans.

Two German Generals Retired.

London, Nov. 3.—A Berlin dispatch quotes the Deutsche Nachrichten of Munich to the effect that Generals von Chrodt and Emil Heigert, who held commands on the western front, have been placed on the retired list.

Record Broken by U. S. Mint.

Philadelphia, Nov. 3.—All records for the number of pieces coined were broken by the United States mint in this city during the month of October.
The total number of coins turned out was 45,251,413.

DEUTSCHLAND AT NEW HAVEN
ON ITS SECOND VOYAGE.

Left Bremen on October 10—Captain Koenig Sails Trip Without Special Interest.

New London, Conn., Nov. 2.—
The German commercial submarine Deutschland arrived at this port early Wednesday morning.

Captain Koenig said the Deutschland left Bremen on October 10 and made the trip here without special interest.
The entire crew comprises 25 men.
The Deutschland appeared in the outer harbor shortly after midnight and proceeded to the dock of the Eastern Forwarding company.

Preparations for the reception of the Bremen were not made at Norfolk or Baltimore, but at New London, Conn. There a special protecting arrangement was built for the diver-preparations that seemed vain until the Deutschland arrived tonight.

The steamer Wilhelmshafen, a North German Lloyd liner tied up in Boston harbor, left its berth there and went to New London to help prepare for the reception of the U-boat and also to act as a shield for the little vessel.

The Deutschland sailed from America August 1 and its arrival in Bre-ma was announced August 23.

BANDITS ROB BANK OF $10,000

Private Institution at Braidwood, Ill., Held Up by Six Men in an Auto—Cut Wires Into Town.

Braidwood, Ill., Nov. 4.—A high-powered racing automobile flashed out of the darkness into this town on Wednesday night and before the inhabitants could be aroused six automobile bandits cut all telephone and telegraph wires, blew open the vaults of a bank and escaped with loot valued at $10,000. The bank was a private institution owned by W. H. Odell & Co.

Mrs. Emma Himes was awakened by the explosion, but was frustrated in her attempt to arouse the residents by the cutting of the telephone wires.

TIPPECANOE

By SAMUEL McCOY

(Copyright, 1916, by Bobbe-Merrill Co.)

An absorbing chronicle of stirring events that grew out of the battle of Tippecanoe in the Indiana wilderness a century ago

Suppose that a man who hated you went to the girl you loved and told her you were a thief. If she believed the unwarranted accusation enough to ask you for an explanation, would you give it? Or would you think that a girl whose faith in her lover was so weak as that didn't deserve an explanation? How David Lawrence handled a problem of that sort is told in this installment of "Tippecanoe."

David, you'll remember, had come all the way from England to the frontier settlement of Corydon, Indiana territory, to kill an enemy. He makes friends with the Americans and falls in love with charming "Toinette O'Bannon. Incidentally, he discovers that Job Cranner is a British spy plotting with hostile Indians against the whites. The last installment closed with Lawrence at the Cranner home, calling on Lydia Cranner. Her father teases them coarsely about love-making.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued.

David flushed with resentment at the man's nervousness, but he gave him a civil good night. He planned to watch the house and confront Cranner when Lydia was not present.

"You won't stay a bit longer? I've been kept overlong with the young man across the river—they're a set of jolly dogs. You won't stay? Good night, my boy!"

The man was evidently laboring under an excitement not wholly due to wine; David had not taken a dozen steps when he heard Cranner burst out in an exultant whisper that was louder than he realized:

"Well, daughter, my work is done!"

"Hush!" said Lydia sharply, and drew him within doors.

David stopped short in his tracks. There was not a sound to be heard. Without doubt, Cranner had finished his work as a spy and was ready to leave, laden with information that would be actually be declared. Should he actually be declared?

There was a jolly, infectious gleam in the Kentuckian's eyes that David had never seen before. He set his jaws firmly together and took a quick step toward the cabin. It might not be too late. A threat of light shone from the crack of the heavy door.

"Mr. Cranner!" he called.

There was the sound of a chair moved hastily back from a table, and the figure of Cranner was outlined in the candlelight.

"Well?" he asked suspiciously.

"I have forgotten a matter that I wished to speak to you about, sir," said David. His voice was without a trace of agitation.

There was a moment's pause. Cranner peered into the darkness.

"Well, if it's no great matter I'll just step outside again."

He closed the door behind him and came forward with hearty friendliness in his voice.

David breathed a sigh of relief. It was time to come to action.

"I'll trouble you for those plans, Cranner," he said quietly.

The man recoiled a step and David heard him draw in his breath sharply. But the light hid his expression and he summoned a blustering:

"Plans? What plans? Young man, you choose a strange hour to joke in."

"You are well aware this is no joke, Cranner. I want those plans of Fort Steuben."

Fort Steuben! Well, damme, if this isn't impudence! If you've come what to say, say it, and be done with this foolishness."

David took a step forward.

"You know well enough what I mean. I know that you are here as one of England's spies. You have made notes concerning Fort Steuben. I want them."

An inarticulate roar of rage burst from Cranner. His voice shook with suppressed fury.

"So that's what you've been doing, you dirty whelp! Spying on me while you pretended to court my daughter! I'll break you with my two hands, you dog!"

He choked with rage and hurled his bulk at David. But with a little new-born in the wilderness, David stepped quickly to the side and drove his long right arm full at the Englishman's distorted face. The blow went straight to the jaw, with the momentum of a sledge behind it, and the spy went down with a grunt. In a flash David had leaped upon him, pinning his arms with his knees, while he tore open the man's waistcoat and thrust his hand quickly into his pockets. A fat bundle of papers rewarded his search, and he rose to his feet with an ejaculation of thankfulness. Cranner groined weakly and strove in vain to rise.

"Get up!" said David grimly. "Your game is done for. One word from me, and you hang at sunrise. But, for your daughter's sake, I'll give you a chance for your life. Get out of Clarkburg tonight and I'll hold these papers. You know where to go—your Indian friends will find a hole for you in the wilderness, doubtless. Go! And may God forgive you!"

He was conscious of no feeling of elation, but only of an unquenching regret that life should be so soon and of a sickening sorrow for the poor girl whose father had forced her with him along this shameful road. When he had gained the tavern, he examined the bundle of papers with a heavy heart—damning evidence, sketches of a dozen forts along the frontier, detailed descriptions of the garrison of each. He folded them up carefully and replaced them in his coat with a sigh. At dawn he set off again for Corydon.

But Cranner tottered back into his daughter's room with the face of a dead man. "It's all up!" he cried in a ghastly whisper. "I must get away from here tonight. There's only one chance to win yet—you'll have to stay here, my girl; I'll see Scull tonight and set him into this Lawrence; and if he succeeds in getting on to me at Detroit, God how can we suspect! You—did you—no, you're true! Goodbye! Do as I bid you. Goodbye! Scull will be over soon—he'll take care of you. I'm glad you are soon to be married!"

He strained the weeping girl to his breast and hurried away. A boat across the foaming river and a stumble through the dark brought him to a cautious tattoo summoned the man from his bed and the story was told, while terror seemed to fix its icy hands more and more deeply in Cranner's throat with every hurrying moment. Scull looked at his white face and excited secret at his collapse. A seeming contempt for the man before whom he had so often cringed filled his heart. "And what do you expect me to do?" he asked coldly.

A flush of his old truculence returned to Cranner. "Do?" he whispered hoarsely. "There's but one thing for you to do, my pretty man. You will have to get those plans back from that skulking rickshaws. It's your own business now. Then give them to Lydia. You may think you've done a fine thing in giving up the work that you came here to do, but I promise you that England has a long arm. You'll not escape if you fail us."

Scull shrank again from his menacing gesture. His abject protestations of feigned helplessness fell heavily from his trembling lips, and the spy, with a growl of satisfaction, stole out again into the dark and silent night.

At Vincennes, two days later, old "Horsehead" Gibson, the lieutenant governor, sat writing a letter to Capt. Billy Hargrove, who was riding miles away in the wilderness at the head of a dozen forest rangers. The old man wrote slowly, with a hand more used to a rifle than a pen. The letter, when he had finished it, ran:

Vincennes, Indiana Territory, July 23, 1811.

For about ten days a man has been around here, but I have not been permitted to go where he pleased and was all through the fort and barracks. He has disappeared and took with him a very fine saddle horse which belonged to Col. Luke Decker, together with a fine double-barreled gun and a pair of pistols. It was thought he went toward the Missouri river and may come near some of your stations. There is no doubt he is a British spy and it is very desirable to capture him. A description of him given by those with whom he was last seen, was a heavy man, five feet ten inches in height, would weigh about one hundred and eighty pounds; dark hair, black eyes, and a nose like a hawk's; a pair of fine, long, pointed ears, and a very dark, long, pointed nose. A pair of fine white dress buttons, knee breeches with silver buttons, a pair of fine white stockings, and a pair of fine white shoes with silver buckles; a swivel belt, made out of beaver skin. Have your men keep a good lookout for him.

By the hand of a friendly Delaware Indian, who wishes to say anything that you wish to say.

CHAPTER IX.

Sacrifice.

The tall young physician from Louisville rode his sorrel mare into Corydon next day and drew rein at Patrice O'Bannon's door.

Toinette, in the early morning sunshine, was rapturous bird-song made into woman, a flower dew-bright, a curl, an embodiment of earth's rejoicing. She welcomed Elliott with a smile that made him wonder, with a ready vanity, if he had not been mistaken in the rebuff she had once administered. If he had pressed her more heartily, she would have loved him. But he could only have the man out of Corydon! The black beast of his jealous hatred rode on his back and he went straight to his purpose.

"I have sad news for you, Toinette," she faded from her face and she looked at him with a slow alarm growing in her eyes.

"It is very hard for me to tell you. It is about Lawrence."

"David!" The name was wrong from her like a gasp.

"I cannot believe the truth myself. You remember that I told you once that I suspected Lawrence of being in league with the Englishman, Cranner? I have learned the certain truth since then—Cranner has fled and Lawrence is left to finish his work—the work of a spy!"

"Who says this?"

"Captain Bullitt at Louisville told me. It will be common talk in another day. I do not know what to do. I the life of this man. Warn him, and there is yet time for him to escape. I shall be happy if you are happy. Only remember that I loved you, Toinette!"

The halting sentences seemed to come from the depths of his soul. He finished and stood before her humbly, his head bowed.

"God bless you," she said very softly.

She spilled the precious ointment of her innocent faith in his words upon the cross of his heart. He raised his head and thanked her mutely, while his pulses leaped with exultation. She had believed him! But would she love Lawrence? He scarcely dared to hope as he whispered:

"If you will warn him . . . at midnight my name will be at his door, ready to ride."

But the girl answered in a voice that seemed to come from beyond the grave, so full of a soul's agony it was:

He turned to hide the mocking smile that lighted up his face.

The girl's face had grown pale as the white rose she held in her hand. But she forced herself to go on—hesitatingly, but in a voice from which all life had fled, so weighted with untold anguish it was:

"You had better inform Judge Boone at once."

"You don't understand, Toinette. I shall not raise a finger against Lawrence. He shall never say I am responsible for his exposure. You alone in Corydon know his secret. It is for you to decide."

"Go," she said quietly, "I will do my duty."

"Have I done mine, Toinette? Do you forgive me?"

"Yes, you have done well," she answered mechanically.

"If you see me again? Oh, Toinette, let me still hope!"

"I cannot answer now. But—" her throat seemed to choke her and she was unable to finish. But through the young doctor's mind there flashed the belief that he would yet make her his. She would forget Lawrence—only let time heal the wound! He raised her hand to his lips, flung himself upon the red mare and was gone.

To Toinette the next minutes were an unreal procession in which a girl named Antoinette O'Bannon moved strangely upon her task, dry-eyed, sternly-voiced. She saw this girl go down the lane to the tavern, where he Blackford sat deep in a book of law; heard her ask him to go with her to David's store; saw him bow with unquestioning courtesy; saw them cross the courthouse square and enter the little storehouse, just then empty of customers; saw David advance toward them gravely, with the proud dignity he had worn since the day she had refused his love. She heard a voice speaking—was it her own?

The two young men looked at the girl in silent wonder. She swept on in the cold torrent of her resolution, checking their unspoken question with upturned hands:

"You have known you but a little while, Mr. Lawrence. You have made your home among us; we have taken you into our friendship. You have pretended to become an American; we have trusted you, befriended you, believed in you. And you have repaid us! The cold snake from which you saved me was less vile! Oh, I do not forget what you did! It is that which makes what you have done all the more terrible. But you say your life. You might have had it, if you had chosen. But you have chosen instead the lives of all these people in the wilderness—these settlers, these men who have never harmed you, these women, these little children. To betray them, who have only loved you, who have been your friends! To give them into the hands of England and to the knives of the Indians!"

Her voice broke. At her first words Blackford's face had taken on an expression of amazement, which grew deeper and deeper as he listened and glanced from one to the other of his two friends. Now, as her voice faltered, his astonishment broke out:

"Toinette, in heaven's name, what is the matter?"

She answered wearily, listlessly, her voice sinking to a whisper, so that she seemed like an exhausted bird that is scarcely able to skim above the waves of the sea:

"He has been here as a British spy!"

Blackford started, then laughed incredulously.

"Toinette, you're joking!"

But she buried her face in her hands and spoke through sobs that shook her from head to foot.

"Oh, if it were not true! . . . Ask him."

Blackford turned to David. His friend had taken a step toward Toinette's first rush of reproach and now leaned against the low counter, trembling, pale as one who has received a mortal wound. The shock of her accusation coming on the heels of the very moment when he had asked his life to confront Cranner, stunned him.

Only his high, indignant pride rose against the sorry riddle—a stubborn pride which made him listen to her wild charges in silence, holding himself in his angry conceit above the violence of contradicting her, above stooping to drag their love in the dust of quarrel. Blackford, striving to pierce beneath the mask of that white, tense face and the inscrutable eyes, cried out in alarm at David's silent acceptance of her words.

"It's not true, is it, David? My God, it can't be true!"

Blackford was silent.

Blackford tried to laugh off his own alarm:

"You two are playing some silly joke on me, of course. All right—I'll own you guiled me. Satisfied, Toinette?"

Toinette threw back her head proudly. The blue eyes that had so often danced with merriment were blazing sapphires.

"Search him, Mr. Blackford," her voice rang out. "I do not doubt but you will find evidence enough to satisfy you!"

His eyes looked into those of his friend with a passion of pleading for denial. But David's voice answered evenly, coldly:

"There is no need to search. I presume that these papers are the ones which Miss O'Bannon wishes."

Rich Indian Chief Street Cleaner.

Officials of the Trenton street department today discovered that they had among their employees a full-blooded Indian chief, Justin Wheel Head, who is the owner of a large reservation and a copper mine in Arizona. His case is made especially extraordinary by reason of the fact that Head, although wealthy, is satisfied with his position as a street cleaner.

Head was born in Near, Cal. He came east when a child to attend the Indian industrial school at Carlisle, Pa., and upon completing his education returned to the West. He bought a claim near Jerome, Ariz., and worked at copper smelting for a time. About five years ago he came east, and has since been employed in industrial plants and on farms—Trenton (N. J.) correspondence Philadelphia Record.

Yes, Indeed.

Rich Indian Chief Street Cleaner.

Officials of the Trenton street department today discovered that they had among their employees a full-blooded Indian chief, Justin Wheel Head, who is the owner of a large reservation and a copper mine in Arizona. His case is made especially extraordinary by reason of the fact that Head, although wealthy, is satisfied with his position as a street cleaner.

Head was born in Near, Cal. He came east when a child to attend the Indian industrial school at Carlisle, Pa., and upon completing his education returned to the West. He bought a claim near Jerome, Ariz., and worked at copper smelting for a time. About five years ago he came east, and has since been employed in industrial plants and on farms—Trenton (N. # TIPPECANOE

By SAMUEL MCCOY

(Copyright, 1916, by Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

An absorbing chronicle of stirring events that grew out of the battle of Tippecanoe in the Indiana wilderness a century ago

Suppose that a man who hated you went to the girl you loved and told her you were a thief. If she believed the unwarranted accusation enough to ask you for an explanation, would you give it? Or would you think that a girl whose faith in her lover was so weak as that didn't deserve an explanation? How David Larrence handled a problem of that sort is told in this installment of "Tippecanoe."

David, you'll remember, had come all the way from England to the frontier settlement of Corydon, Indiana territory, to kill an enemy. He makes friends with the Americans and falls in love with charming "Toinette" O'Bannon. Incidentally, he discovers that Job Cramer is a British spy plotting with hostile Indians against the whites. The last installment closed with Larrence at the Cramer home, calling on Lydia Cramer. Her father teases them coarsely about love-making.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued.

David flushed with resentment at the man's coarseness, but he gave him a civil good night. He planned to watch the house and confront Cramer when Lydia was not present.

"You won't stay a bit longer? You've been overlong with the young men across the river—they're a set of jolly dogs. You won't stay? Good night, my boy!"

The man was evidently laboring under an excitement not wholly due to wine; David had not taken a dozen steps when he heard Cramer burst out in an exultant whisper that was louder than he realized:

"Well, daughter, my work is done!"

"Hush!" said Lydia sharply, and drew him within doors.

David stopped short in his tracks. There was not a moment to lose. Without doubt, Cramer had finished his work as a spy and was ready to leave, laden with information that would be of value to the British, should war actually be declared.

What a jolly, ingenuous guest the Kentuckians must have found him!

He set his jaws firmly together and took a quick step toward the cabin. It might not be too late. A threat of light shone from the crack of the heavy door.

"Mr. Cramer!" he called.

There was the sound of a chair moved hastily back from a table, and the figure of Cramer was outlined in the candlelight.

"Well?" he asked suspiciously.

"I have forgotten a matter that I wished to speak to you about, sir," said David. His voice was without a trace of agitation.

There was a moment's pause. Cramer peered into the darkness.

"Well, if it's no great matter I'll just step outside again."

He closed the door behind him and came forward with hearty friendliness in his voice:

David breathed a sigh of relief. It was time to come to action.

"I'll trouble you for those plans, Cramer," he said quietly.

The man recalled a step and David heard him draw in his breath sharply. But the night hid his expression and he summoned a bluster:

"Plans? What plans? Young man, you choose a strange word to joke in!"

"You are well aware this is no joke, Cramer. I want those plans of Fort Steuben."

"Fort Steuben! Well, damme, if this isn't impudence! If you've something to say, say it, and be done with this foolishness."

David took a step forward.

"You know well enough what I mean. I know that you are here as one of England's spies. You have made notes concerning Fort Steuben. I want them."

An inarticulate roar of rage burst from Cramer. His voice shook with suppressed fury.

"So that's what you've been doing, you dirty whelp! Spying on me while you pretended to court my daughter! I'll break you with my own hands, you dog!"

He checked with rage and hurled his bulk at David. But, with a litheness new to him in the wilderness, David stepped quickly to one side and drove his long right arm full at the Englishman's distorted face. The blow went straight to the jaw, with the momentum of a sledge body behind it, and the spy went down with a grunt.

In a flash David had leaped upon him, pinning his arms with his knees, while he tore open the man's waistcoat and thrust his hand quickly into his pockets. A fat bundle of papers rewarded his search and he rose to his feet with an exclamation of thankfulness. Cramer groaned weakly and strove in vain to rise.

"Get up!" said David grimly. "Your game is done. One word from me, and you hang at sunrise. But, for your daughter's sake, I'll give you a chance for your life. Get out of Clarksville tonight and I'll hold these papers. You know where to go—your Indian friends will find a hole for you in the wilderness, doubtless. Go! And may God forgive you!"

He was conscious of no feeling of elation, but only of an unbearable regret that life should be so sordid; and of a sickening sorrow for the poor girl whose father had forced her with him along this shameful road. When he had gained the tavern, he examined the bundle of papers with a heavy heart—damning evidence, sketches of a dozen forts along the frontier, detailed descriptions of the garrison of each. He folded them up carefully and replaced them in his coat with a sigh. At dawn he set off again for Corydon.

But Cramer tottered back into his daughter's room with the face of a dead man. "It's all up!" he cried in a ghastly whisper. "I must get away from here tonight. There's only one chance to win yet—you'll have to stay here, my girl; I'll see Scull tonight and set him upon this Larrence; and if he succeeds in getting the plans back, you are to bring them to me at Detroit. God, how came he to suspect! You did not—no, you're true! Goodby! Do as I bid you, my girl. Goodby! Scull will be over soon—he'll take care of you. I'm glad you are soon to be married."

He strained the weeping girl to his breast and hurried away. A boat across the foaming river and a stumble through the dark brought him to Scull's door. A cautious tattoo summoned the man from his bed and the story was told, while terror seemed to fix its icy hands more and more deeply in Cramer's throat and every lurking moment. Scull looked at his white face and excited herself at his collapse. A seeming contempt for the man before whom he had so often cringed filled his heart. "And

The halting sentences seemed to come from the depths of his soul. He finished and stood before her humbly, his head bowed.

"God bless you," she said very softly.

She spilled the precious ointment of her innocent faith in his words upon his head and thanked her manly, while his pulses leaped with exultation. She had believed him! But would she warn Larrence? He scarcely dared to hope as he whispered:

"If you will warn him . . . at midnight my mare will be at his door, ready to ride."

But the girl answered in a voice that seemed to come from beyond the grave, so full of a soul's agony it was:

"There will be no need . . . Oh, David, David, David!"

He turned to hide the mocking smile that lighted up his face.

The girl's face had grown pale as the white rose she held in her hand. But she forced herself to go on—hesitatingly, but in a voice from which all life had fled, she whispered with unutterable anguish it was:

"You had better inform Judge Boone at once."

"You don't understand, Toinette. I shall not raise a finger against Larrence. He shall never say I am responsible for his exposure. You alone in Corydon know his secret. It is for you to decide."

"Go," she said quietly, "I will do my duty."

"Have I done mine, Toinette? Do you forgive me?"

"Yes, you have done well," she answered mechanically.

"I may see you again? Oh, Toinette, let me still hope!"

"I cannot answer now. But—" her throat seemed to choke her and she was unable to finish. But through the young doctor's mind there flashed the belief that he would yet make her his.

She would forget Larrence—only let time heal the wound! He raised her hand to his lips, flung himself upon the red mare and was gone.

To Toinette the next minutes were an unreal procession in which a girl named Antoinette O'Bannon moved strangely up her task, dry-eyed, dazed, and alone.

And with steady fingers he unfurled his coat and waistcoat, and while Blackford gazed in horror, slowly drew out the packet of papers he had wrested from Cramer. He put them in his hands and bowed to Toinette with a touch of ironic courtesy.

"You will find them all there," he said.

A single glance made Blackford realize the meaning.

"Oh, David, David!" he cried.

A thousand voices, the confused murmur of a mighty throng, seemed ringing in Toinette's brain, and she fought against a sickening dizziness that made the walls whirl around her.

"That is enough, Mr. Blackford?" she asked weakly, and on tottering knees she turned and left the two men alone.

"Surely you can explain this, David!" cried she; his faith in his friend clung to him in stubborn defiance of the documents' mute accusation.

"Do you think it necessary to explain?" said David harshly. The anger which he had withheld from Toinette had mounted slowly till now his iron will had reached a white heat of furious resentment. "By God, I explain to no man!"

He looked him straight in the eyes. "No man on earth can use that tone to me," he said quietly, "—except you, David, old man."

He laid his hand gently on his friend's shoulder and the angry light in David's eyes was suddenly quenched.

"It isn't true," he said, and was silent once again.

"That's the only explanation you and I need, David," he answered with a grave smile; and David crushed his hand in a mighty grip.

"I know, you understand! You believe in me!" he cried in a voice that showed how cruel the strain upon his nervous pride had been; and the two young men smiled straight into each other's eyes.

David had meant to keep his own secret, but now the burden of his heart flooded over at the trust in him. He told of what he had learned concerning Cramer; told how he had come into possession of the secret agent's plans and documents. "I had meant to wait word to Vincennes to search for Cramer," he said, "and I meant to take these papers there at the first opportunity. How Toinette guessed that I had them, I cannot understand. But, by heaven, Blackford, I can't explain to her! Don't you understand? I wanted her love. I thought she had given it to me. But if she doubts me, then—"

His voice faltered again.

"She has worried herself over some rumor—poor Toinette, she's strung to the breaking-point," said like gently.

"I want you to do something for me, David," replied David, unheeding the excuse. "I cannot stay in Corydon after this. I cannot be indebted to Mr. O'Bannon any longer. I must go."

"You know best, David. It's not my business. But where?"

"Vincennes, I suppose. I may as well stay on there, after I have delivered this evidence to General Gibson. It doesn't make any difference. But I want you to see Mr. O'Bannon and turn my accounts over to him. Will you do this for me, David?"

"Willingly, David. But, oh, I'll hate to give you up!"

"You're the best friend I ever had. So I shall have to lose you, as I have lost everyone I ever loved." David smiled bitterly.

"David, don't go! You'll win yet! She can't hold to this silly mistake. Why, I'll explain things to her! Go back, you sore-headed old bear, and—"

But David checked him.

"I shall never enter that house. And I forbid your speaking to her on this subject. Do not speak of her again!"

To the remained no question of David's honor; but the poison of Elliott's words had found an abiding hold in the girl's heart. Toinette had reached her father's house she knew not how. She gained the harbor of her own chamber, closed the door, and sank upon her bed in a prostration of grief. She had saved the frontier from the traitor, she thought; but she had broken her own heart.

David's back was toward Corydon and all his hopes. His face was toward the north. The trace through the forest stretched away toward Vincennes and he marched along with a resolute step. There he handed over to the territorial officers the plans that he had taken from Cramer; and from them their blunt thanks, and found employment in the ancient trading house of the Spaniard, Vigo.

Jackson, Ky.—Another Kentucky feudist has died "with his boots on." Mose Feltner, known in every household throughout the mountains, was killed by United States Marshal George Sizemore while resisting arrest. The officer was enroute in the county court at Hazard, where the shooting occurred.

Feltner figured in some way in nearly all the family feuds in this section. He was one of the leaders in the Harpeth-Cockfield feud in "Bloody" Rutherford in 1905. Nineteen men were indicted for conspiracy to kill. A tangled web of false testimony caused Judge Benton to summon a grand jury, which indicted 23 men for perjury and an attorney for the defense for subordination of perjury. There were four convictions for the murder.

Brains of His Clan.

Sheriff Ed Callahan, often referred to as "Doc," was shot from ambush in 1912. His kin seem to be satisfied with the four convictions. Callahan was the brains of his clan.

Pulton B. French, leader in the French-Aversole feud, passed away recently at Winchester. Although he had assisted at many such deeds, his own death was due to natural causes. He left the mountains and went to the Bluegrass to live the quiet life of a small-town business man. He often said his only regret was the drowning of a chicken when he was a boy.

So, too, Bob Profit, French's henchman, died recently at Winchester with a doctor at his bedside and no bullet holes in his body. He tried of fighting and went to Winchester, where he made money in the saloon business.

And now Feltner is dead.

California Woman Has Naryrow Escape From Reptile But Her Dog Is Bitten.

Chico, Cal.—Mrs. Guy Hume had a narrow escape from a rattlesnake at Dix's camp near Paradise. She discovered the snake under the chair in which she was sitting.

Mrs. Hume summoned her husband, who killed the snake. A moment later Mrs. Hume spied another rattler and shot at it with a rifle. She missed and a bit of rusted at the snake and was bitten on the ear.

Mr. Hume killed the rattler and had to amputate the dog's ear to save the animal's life.

FOILS ELOPEMENT OF AGED LOVERS

Maid of 78 and Swain of 92 Are Pursued by Parent With Shotgun.

Beaver Falls, Pa.—Love's young dream was shattered the other day by an irate father with a shotgun, when Caleb Smith, ninety-six years old, chased Roman Williams, ninety-two years old, into the county recorder's office and fired both barrels, loaded with salt, at Williams, who had eloped with Caleb's daughter, Cynthia, seventy-eight years old.

As Williams was attacked by the angry monogamist the coy maiden fainted. Her father was thoroughly wrapped up in his job, however, and he rained blows on the lover and paid no attention to his daughter's plight.

Williams, who soon looked more like a railroad accident than a romantic Lohengrin, hoisted the white flag.

WHERE ARE THE HEIRS OF JAMES BONNER?

The following letter, which explains itself, has been received by Mayor Ellis and in order to give it proper publicity the mayor has turned it over to the newspapers of the city:

The Mayor of Grand Rapids, Grand Rapids, Wisconsin.

Dear Sir:

We are trying to locate the relatives of James Bonner, deceased, who died about two years ago in this county. At one time many years ago he conducted a restaurant in this city on Reed street across from the old Union or St. Paul depot. We understand that he had an adopted son. We do not know whether the adoption was a legal adoption or not, but the name of this adopted son was William Bonner, and he married a daughter of a man who conducted a hotel in your city. The purpose of this letter is to bring the matter to the attention of the newspapers of your city. Will you kindly give the same whatever publicity you are able. Mr. Bonner left a small estate, and we are trying to locate relatives.

Thanking you in advance for the favor, we are,

Very truly yours,
Rowan, Kalaher & Stoeker.

CRANBERRIES MOVING

M. O. Potter, who has been out to the marsh of late where he has been cleaning up and shipping the season's crop of berries, reports that the last of the berries were shipped out on Monday, which is considerable earlier than was done last year. It was thought earlier in the season that the crop would not move very fast this year, as there was a great shortage of cars early in the season, and it was expected that when the time came for shipping none would be available. However, when they did commence to come there was an abundance, and the result is that the crop was moved earlier than usual.

WILL HOLD HEARINGS

A representative of the Industrial Commission will be in this city on the 10th and 11th of November for the purpose of holding hearings on a number of cases that will come up at that time. Among the cases that will be heard at that time are the following:

Raymond Starr vs. W. T. Jones.

John M. Zwaschka vs. Roddis Veneer and Lbr. Co.

Frank Sentz vs. Grand Rapids St. Ry. Co.

TIPPECANOE

By SAMUEL MCCOY

(Copyright, 1916, by Bobbe-Merrill Co.)

An absorbing chronicle of stirring events that grew out of the battle of Tippecanoe in the Indiana wilderness a century ago

Suppose that a man who hated you went to the girl you loved and told her you were a thief. If she believed the unwarranted accusation enough to ask you for an explanation, would you give it? Or would you think that a girl whose faith in her lover was so weak as that didn't deserve an explanation? How David Lawrence handled a problem of this sort is told in this installment of "Tippecanoe."

David Lawrence, you'll remember, had come all the way from England to the frontier settlement of Corydon, Indiana territory, to kill an enemy. He makes friends with the Americans and falls in love with charming "Toinette O'Bannon. Incidentally, he discovers that Job Cranmer is a British spy plotting with hostile Indians against the whites. The last installment closed with Lawrence at the Cranmer home, calling on Lydia Cranmer. Her father teases them coarsely about love-making.

David flushed with resentment at the man's coarseness, but he gave him a civil good night. He planned to watch the house and confront Cranmer when Lydia was not present.

"You won't stay a bit longer?" he asked, looking at the girl who had been kept waiting for him in the young girl's room. "You won't stay? Good night, my boy."

The man was evidently laboring under an excitement not wholly due to wine; David had not taken a dozen sips when he heard Cranmer burst into an exclamation which was louder than his usual blarney.

"Well, daughter, my work is done!"

"Hush!" said Lydia sharply, and drew him within doors.

David stopped short in his tracks. There was not a moment to lose. Without doubt, Cranmer had finished his work as a spy and was ready to leave. Lydia, however, was not to be deceived. The man who had been so friendly to her, should now actually be deceived. What a jolly, lighthearted guest the Kentuckians must have found him!

He set his jaws firmly together and took a quick step toward the cabin. It might not be too late. A threat of light shone from the crack of the heavy door.

"Mr. Cranmer?" he called.

"There was the sound of a chair moved hastily back from a table, and the figure of Cranmer was outlined in the candlelight.

"Well?" he asked suspiciously.

"I have forgotten a matter that I wished to speak to you about, sir," said David. His voice was without a trace of agitation.

There was a moment's pause. Cranmer peered into the darkness.

"Well, if it's no great matter I'll just step outside again."

"He closed the door behind him and came forward with hearty friendliness in his voice.

"Want me to do for you, my lad?"

David breathed a sigh of relief. It was time to come to action.

"I'll trouble you for those plans, Cranmer," he said quietly.

The man recoiled a step and David heard him draw in his breath sharply. But the night hid his expression and he summoned a blustering.

"Plans? What plans? Young man, you are a strange hour to joke in."

"You are well aware this is no joke, Cranmer. I want those plans of Fort Steuben."

"Fort Steuben? Well, damme, if this isn't impudence! If you've something to say, say it, and be done with this foolishness."

David took a step forward.

"You know well enough what I mean. I know that you are here as one of England's spies. You have made notes concerning Fort Steuben. I want them."

An inarticulate roar of rage burst from Cranmer. His voice shook with suppressed fury.

"So that's what you've been doing, you dirty whelp! Spying on me while you pretended to court my daughter! I'll break you with my two hands, you dog!"

He choked with rage and hurled his bulk at David. But, with a lightning swiftness in the wilderness, David stepped quickly to one side and drove his long right arm full at the Englishman's distorted face. The blow went straight to the jaw, with the momentum of a sledge hammer, and the spy was hurled back with a grunt.

David had leaped upon him, pinning his arms with his knees, while he tore open the man's waistcoat and thrust his hand quickly into his pockets. A fat bundle of papers rewarded his search and he rose to his feet with an ejaculation of thankfulness. Cranmer groaned weakly and strove in vain to rise.

"Get up!" said David grimly. "Your game is done for. One word from me, and you are a dead man. I'll hang at sunrise. But, for your daughter's sake, I'll give you a chance for your life. Get out of Clarkburg tonight and I'll hold these papers. You know where to go—your Indian friends will find a hole for you in the wilderness. Goodnight. Go! And may God forgive us of feeling of either side."

He was conscious of no feeling of either side. Life should be so solid; and of a sickening sorrow for the poor girl whose father had forced her with him along this shameful road. When he had gained the tavern, he examined the bundle of papers with a heavy heart—blaming evidence, skeletons, detailed descriptions of the garrison of each. He rubbed them up carefully and replaced them in his coat with a sigh. At dawn he set off again for Corydon.

But Cranmer tumbled back into his daughter's room with the face of a dead man. "We're all up!" he cried in a ghastly whisper. "I must get away from here tonight. There's only one chance to win yet—you'll have to stay here, my girl; I'll see Scott tonight and set him up to see Scott Lawrence; and if he succeeds in getting the plans back, you are to bring them to me at Detroit. God, how can I suspect you!—did you not, you're true! Goodbye! Do as I bid you. Goodbye! Scott will be over soon—he'll take care of you. I'm glad you are soon to be married."

He strained the weeping girl to his breast and hurried away. A boat across the river came in the night, and a struggle through the dark brought him to Scott's door. A cautious tattoo summoned the man from his bed and the story was told, while terror seemed to fix its icy hands more and more deeply in Cranmer's throat with every hurrying moment. Scott looked at his white face and exhaled severely at his collapse. A seeming contempt for the man before whom he had so often cringed filled his heart. "And

The halting sentences seemed to come from the depths of his soul. He rushed and stood before her humbly, his head bowed.

"God bless you," she said very softly.

She spilled the precious ointment of her innocent faith in his words upon the dross of his heart. He raised his head and thanked her mutely, while his knees leaped with excitement. She had believed him! But would she warn Lawrence? He scarcely dared to hope as he whispered:

"If you will warn him . . . at midnight my name will be at his door, ready to ride."

She smiled and answered in a voice that seemed to come from beyond the grave, so full of a soul's agony it was:

He turned to hide the mocking smile that lighted up his face.

The night had grown pale as the white rose she held in her hand. But she forced herself to go on—unhesitatingly, but in a voice from which all life had fled, so weighted with unutterable anguish it was:

"You had better inform Judge Boone at once."

"You don't understand, Toinette. I shall not raise a word against Lawrence. He shall never say I am responsible for his exposure. You alone in Corydon know his secret. It is for you to decide."

"Go," she said quietly. "I will do my duty."

"Have I done mine, Toinette? Do you forgive me?"

"Yes, you have done well," she answered mechanically.

"Now you see you again? Oh, Toinette, let me still hope!"

"I cannot answer now. But—" her throat seemed to choke her and she was unable to finish. But through the young doctor's mind there flashed the belief that he would yet make her his.

She would forget Lawrence—only let time do this for him. He raised her to his lips, thrust himself upon the red mare and was gone.

To Toinette the next minutes were an unreal procession in which a girl named Antoinette O'Bannon moved strangely upon her last dry-eyed, steady-voiced. She sat in the tavern, where David had left her, in a book of law; heard her ask him to go with her to David's store; saw him bow with unquestioning courtesy; saw them cross the courthouse square and enter the little storehouse. Just then a crowd of men, with a woman in the lead, came toward them gravely, with the proud dignity he had worn since the day she had refused his love. She heard a voice speaking—was it her own?

"We have known you but a little while, Mr. Lawrence. You have made your home among us; we have taken you into our friendship. You have pretended to become an American; we have trusted you. And you have repaid us by this!"

The called snake from which you saved me was less vile! Oh, I do not forget what you did! It is that which makes what you have done all the more terrible. I owe you my life. You might have had it if you had chosen. But you have chosen to betray the lives of all these people in the wilderness—settlers, these men who have never harmed you, these women, these little children. To betray them, who have only loved you, who have been your friends! To give them into the hands of England and to the knives of the Indians!"

Her voice broke. At her first words Blackford's face had taken on an expression of amazement, which grew deeper and deeper as he listened and glanced from one to the other of his two friends. Now, as her voice faltered, his astonishment broke out.

"Toinette, in heaven's name, what is the matter?"

She answered wearily, listlessly, her voice sinking to a whisper, so that she seemed like an exhausted bird that is scarcely able to skim above the waves of the sea:

Blackford started, then laughed incredulously.

"Toinette, you're joking!"

But she hurried her face in her hands and spoke through sobs that shook her from head to foot.

Blackford turned to David. His friend had taken a step backward at Toinette's first words of reproach and now leaned against the low counter, trembling, pale as one who has received a mortal wound. The shock of her accusation coming on the heels of the very moment when he had asked his life to confront Cranmer, stunned him.

Only his high, indignant pride rose against the storm.

David, which bade him listen to her wild charge in silence, holding himself in his angry conceit above the violence of contradicting her, above stooping to drag their love in the dust of quarrel. Blackford, striving to pierce beneath the mask of that white, tense face and the tearful eyes, cried out in reply at David's silent acceptance of her words.

"It's not true, is it, David? My God, it can't be true!"

David was silent.

Blackford tried to laugh off his own alarm:

"You two are playing some silly joke on me, of course. All right! I'll own you called me. Satisfied, Toinette?"

Toinette threw back her head proudly. The blue eyes that had so often danced with merriment were blazing sapphires.

He's eyes looked into those of his friend with a passion of pleading for denial. But David's voice answered evenly, coldly:

"There is no need to search. I presume that these papers are the ones which Miss O'Bannon wishes."

And with steady fingers he unfurled his coat and waistcoat, and slowly Blackford gazed in horror, slowly drew out the packet of papers he had wrested from Cranmer. He put them in his hands and bowed to Toinette with a touch of ironic courtesy.

"You will find them all there," he said.

A single glance made Blackford realize their meaning.

"Oh, David, David!" he cried.

A thousand voices, the confused murmur of a mighty throng, seemed ringing in Toinette's brain, and she fought against a sickening giddiness that made the walls whirl around her.

"That is enough, Mr. Blackford," she asked weakly, and with tottering knees she turned and left the two men alone.

"Surely you can explain this, David!" cried David, his faith in his friend clinging to him in stubborn defiance of the documents' mute accusation.

"Do you think it necessary to explain?" said David harshly. The anger which he had withdrawn from Toinette had mounted wildly upon his face. His hand had gripped the hilt of his sword, and a white heat of furious resentment. "By God, I explain to no man!"

He looked him straight in the eyes.

"No man on earth can use that tone to me," he said quietly. "—except you, David, old man."

He laid his hand gently on his friend's shoulder and the angry light in David's eyes was suddenly quenched.

"It isn't true," he said, and was silent once again.

"That's the only explanation you and I need, David," he answered with a grave smile, and David crushed his hand in a mighty grip.

"You believe in me, don't you?"

"I believe in you, David, in a voice that showed how cruel the strain upon his nervous pride had been; and the two young men smiled straight into each other's eyes.

David had meant to keep his own

secret, but now the burden of his heart flooded over at the trust in him. He told of what he had learned concerning Cranmer; told how he had come into possession of the secret agent's maps and documents. "I had already shown them to Vincennes to be kept for Cranmer," he said, "and I meant to take these papers there at the first opportunity. How Toinette guessed that I had them, I cannot understand. But, by heaven, Blackford, I cannot explain to her! Don't you understand? I wanted to tell you. But if she would not listen to me. But if she would not listen to me. . . ."

His voice faltered again. "She has worried herself over some rumor—poor Toinette, she's strong to the breaking-point," said David gently.

"I want you to do something for me, David," replied David, unheeding the excuse. "I cannot stay in Corydon after this. I cannot be indebted to Mr. O'Bannon any longer. I must go."

"You know best, David. It's not my business. But where?"

"Vincennes, I suppose. I may as well stay on there, after I have delivered this evidence to General Gibson. It doesn't make any difference. But I want you to do something for me. Will you do this for me, David?"

"Willingly, David. But, oh, I'll hate to give you up!"

"You're the best friend I ever had. So I shall have to lose you, as I have lost everyone I ever loved." David smiled bitterly.

"Duvo, don't go! You'll win yet! She can't hold this still! You'll win yet! Why, I'll explain things to her! Go back, David, and tell her I'm here!"

But David checked him.

"I shall never enter that house. And I forbid your speaking to her on this subject. Do not speak of her again."

His tone was unyielding, final; and grieving in silent sympathy for his friend's shattered hopes, like helped him close up the major wound of the little store and leave him good by.

He remained no question of David's honor; but the poison of Elliott's words had found an abiding hold in the girl's heart. Toinette had reached her father's house she knew not how. She gained the harbor of her own chamber, closed the door, and sank upon her bed in a paroxysm of grief. She had saved the frontier from her father's ruin; but she had broken her own heart.

David's back was toward Corydon and all his hopes. His face was toward the north. The trace through the forest stretched away toward Vincennes and he marched along resolutely.

There he handed over to the territorial officers the plans that he had taken from Cranmer. They found them blank thanks, and found employment in the ancient trading house of the Spaniard, Vigo.

How soon do you think David will forget Toinette and become smitten with some pretty French lass in Vincennes?

ANOTHER FEUDIST DIES IN BOOTS

Mountain Bad Man Is Slain by a United States Marshal.

WAS IN MANY FIGHTS

Moonlight Schools and Industrial Development Doing Much to Stamp Out Feuds—Locomotive Whistle Displaces Rifle Report.

Jackson, Ky.—Another Kentucky feudist has died "with his boots on," Caleb Smith, ninety-eight years old, chased Roman Williams, ninety-two years old, into the country resort of the city here and fired both barrels, loaded with salt at Williams, who had eloped with Caleb's daughter, Cynthia, seventy-eight years old.

As Williams was attacked by the angry monomaniac the coy maiden fainted. Her father was thoroughly wrapped up in his job, however, and he rained blows on the lover and paid no attention to his daughter's plight.

Williams, who soon looked more like a railroad accident than a romantic Lohengrin, hoisted the white flag.

Feltner figured in some way in nearly all the family feuds in this section during his lifetime. He was one of the leaders in the Hargis-Cockrell feud in "Bloody" Breathitt in 1905. He testified at the trial to a remarkable deed in assassination. He said that Sheriff Ed Callahan and the Hargisses hired him to murder James B. Marshall, whose killing has been immortalized in the weird mountain ballads, which can be heard from the mouth of the blind peddlers in every mountain county seat. Instead of doing the murder, he said, he warned Marshall.

Many things have happened in the last five years to stamp out feuds. There are the moonlight schools, fostered by Mrs. Corn Wilson Stewart, editor of the Moorehead Mountaineer, which are teaching old and young to read and write and to realize the folly of fighting.

Probably the most important element of change is the industrial development. The whistle of the locomotive has driven out the report of the rifle. The mountaineers have learned that the pick and ax are better weapons than the gun and knife. This section abounds in coal and timber, which is now being developed on a large scale by eastern capitalists.

The manner in which Judge James M. Benson enforced justice when the slayers of Sheriff Ed Callahan were brought to trial in Winchester two years ago has also had a deterrent effect on crime. Fourteen men were under indictment for conspiracy to kill. A tangled web of false testimony caused Judge Benton to summon a grand jury. The jury, however, was unable to reach a verdict and the case was thrown overboard.

Williams had his conveyance, an aged horse and an old-fashioned buggy, and in this they drove to the city. The father, reaching home soon after, hunched up his old mule and pursued the elopers. He arrived at the recorders office as the swain, in a shy and diffident manner, was giving the details essential to obtain a license, while his sweetheart stood coyly in a corner, blushing like a debutante at her first proposal.

Citizen Building by Civic Training in the Schools

Prof. Wilson Gill proposes to prepare our native and foreign born children for the duties of self-government so that we may have a nation honestly and efficiently and justly conducted

The presence of large numbers of foreign workers in many parts of the United States—persons who do not understand our laws, our language, our forms of government in city, state and nation—is full of danger for the country. The lack of interest in civic affairs by a large proportion of our own educated American population is another big danger, taken especially in relation to the presence here of the outsiders.

Many of the industrial towns and cities in New England and in other parts of the country have populations almost half foreign. There is frequent rioting with attendant loss of lives and destruction of property. The spirit of mob lawlessness of this sort seems to be spreading in many communities.

On the other hand, we find dishonest government—plain graft, bad administration of law, representative officials who do not represent the mass of taxpayers—in practically every city and state in America. Many agencies have sought the cause of this state of affairs and are hunting a remedy.

The chief cause of the foreign unrest and lawlessness appears to be ignorance. Only a very small percentage of the rough labor which has come to us from Europe can speak or understand the language of the country. Practically none has any idea whatever of our laws, our standard of living, our governmental methods.

And the great cause of dishonesty in government in our towns, cities and states appears to be the indifference of the great mass of intelligent, prosperous American citizens to what goes on right under their noses. They don't take the trouble to vote. They don't take the trouble to participate in primaries and conventions and see to it that good men are nominated for office. They leave it all to the politicians, who are in the governing business—so called—not because of their fitness to administer laws, spend public money, deal out justice, etc., for the good of the community, but strictly and purely for what they can get out of it. Just graft for themselves and their friends.

Civic Training in Schools.
In a recent article in the Philadelphia Public Ledger, Prof. Wilson L. Gill, who was put in charge of the school system of Cuba during the American occupation of that island after the Spanish-American war, offers a study remedy for both these dangers to the peace and happiness and well-being of the United States.

"Educate," he says. "Build citizens by giving them civic training in the schools. Beginning with the tots in the primary grades, teach the boys and girls how their school, their town, their country, their state, their nation is conducted. Teach them to vote and decide the little problems of their daily lives in the schoolroom by methods employed in government.

"Make each schoolroom, for instance, a little town. Let the pupils under the teacher's supervision elect a mayor from among their number and have all the others compose a board of councilmen. Put up to them problems of school, town, county, state, national management, to be decided on the principles of justice and the safety and well-being of the majority.

"A proper appeal must be made to the pupils," Professor Gill says, "and they must be cultivated to work with. Newly all boys and girls are essentially good. This is true, even if, by reason of an unfortunate environment, a child has developed some very bad habits, even those of dishonesty. If the appeal is properly made to them, they can be counted on definitely to stand for that which is honest, 'fair and square,' clean, generous and right.

"Personal and printed assistance must be given to them for carrying on their government in the spirit of American institutions and in accord with correct civic forms, to maintain order and develop co-operation and efficiency for every end and purpose. They must be shown how to solve the problems of their daily intercourse, and, as their teachers help them to become independent in solving the problems in arithmetic, so their teachers must help them to become independent in solving their daily problems of social and civic relations. The teacher's part in the use of this laboratory method of moral and civic training is the same as in mathematics. The teacher's authority and responsibility in both cases are to encourage and help the pupils to keep up enthusiasm, to become independent of the method, the teacher to arrive at clear-cut decisions. At that point the old educational process, as in mathematics, ends, but in this new laboratory work, dealing with the actual practical problems of daily moral and civic life, there is another most important step, which is immediately to put these decisions into execution and to co-operate for the good of all.

"What is needed for introducing democracy in schools?
"First—The right method—there is one, the laboratory method, and there cannot be another.
"Second—Practical plans—there can be but one right general plan, but of this there may be innumerable variations.
"Third—A person skilled in introducing the method and supervising the use of it.
"Fourth—Authority for such introduction and supervising.

INVENTS A PIANO TYPEWRITER

Herman Darewski will shortly introduce to England the most wonderful invention in the world of musical mechanics since the coming of the automatic player piano. It is a piano typewriter which reproduces in ordinary musical notation whatever the performer plays. A pianist can make a copy of any piece of music by merely playing it through. By the insertion of carbon papers half

USELESS WARNING AGAINST KISSING.

New York state department of health has issued a warning against kissing. This experiment has been tried so often without success that not much hope can be held out. While the theories on which it is based have much scientific support, it is subject to the uncertainties which beset other safety systems and devices. The human element intervenes. Before deciding on rigid enforcement of the rule, the New York state department of health ought appoint a commission to observe and ascertain whether the rule will work.

WILSON L. GILL, LL. B.

"Fifth—Missionary work to arouse a popular demand for citizenship training in schools and to induce school authorities, state legislatures and the United States congress to do their part in this cause.

The Right Method.
"Since citizenship and government are matters of action, as well as of knowledge, the method of teaching them must be the laboratory method, by which the pupil learns how to do a thing by doing it. In this respect citizenship is like swimming, which must be learned by practice in swimming; or carpentry, which must be learned by working under the direction of a carpenter. Citizenship must be learned by performing the right actions of citizenship, as well as by learning academically the facts of the subject.

"The first essential of a correct plan for teaching American citizenship is that it shall be in accord with the spirit of American institutions, which is expressed by the Golden Rule, in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. For instance, it must assure equal rights and justice to all, and, of course, must not give special privileges or establish class distinctions, as in ancient Rome and Greece, strong traces of which still remain in our own country.

"The second essential is that so far as the school government is developed, it shall be reasonably parallel with some correct form of American government among adults, and give no wrong ideas to pupils, with the thought that they can be easily corrected later. It ought to follow, as naturally as possible, the plan of keeping reasonably separate the legislative, executive and judicial elements of government. What the form of government is, if it is true to American civics, may not be a serious question. The most simple form is that in which there are three officers, one at the head of the legislative department, another of the executive, and the third of the judicial. To these three officers may be added those of clerks, librarians, health, peace and other officers.

Schoolroom the Unit.
"It is a good practice to consider the schoolroom, under the instruction of a teacher, as the unit of organization, rather than several rooms under the principal of the school. The former plan tends toward a permanent and thorough use of the method, the latter to the dropping of the method in case the principal falls ill or leaves the school. The schoolroom government may follow the plan of the locality in which it is situated. If it is in a city, it may be well to follow the general plan of the city, with a mayor, judge and president of the council, all the pupils being the council, or legislative body, though it would be undesirable and impossible to reproduce all the details of a large city government. If the school is in a town, the schoolroom government should in form be that of a town; but as towns turn into cities, and people go from towns to live in cities, it is good practice, where town government is used part of the year, to use the city form the other part of the year. It is desirable to have decisions as frequently as four times in the school year, that as many as practicable may enjoy the moral and educational benefit of being elected and of carrying the responsibility of the officers.

Possible, of Course.
Possibly some married men wander around at night for the purpose of convincing themselves that there is no place like home.

Worried Small Girl.
One day little Katherine was playing in front of her home when she noticed a man up on a telegraph post fixing some wires. She called up to him, "Man, ain't you afraid you'll fall down?" He replied, "No, I won't fall." Then she said, "Some day you will." After a moment's thought she again called to him, "Does your mamma know you're up there?"

Its Pitiless Publicity.

FEATURES OF NEW FASHIONS

Paris Insists on Detached Trains of Velvet for the Frocks for Evening Wear.

AGAIN THE PLAITED SKIRT

Is a Favorite Worn With Long-Waisted Straight Bodice of Metal Embroidered Net—Draped Collars Will Be Largely Worn This Winter—Footwear.

New York.—All the French clothes of importance have arrived. From now on, the decision for failure or success will be left to the public.

The new gowns have detached trains of embroidered velvet lined with a contrasting color of satin, and sometimes partly lined with fur, in medieval fashion. Douillet has an immense variety of attractive evening frocks of oxidized metal, heavily embroidered with tulle, pink satin, with a part of the bodice and the sides and back of the skirt which extends into a long train made of dahlia red velvet.

The balance of dignity in the new fashions is thrown on the side of the long evening skirt with the train, but a remnant of the present fashion is in a short line across the exact front of the skirt. No French designer seems to have considered whether the skirt was long or moderately short, however, in placing a train on it. When there is so much uniformity of opinion among the French houses as is shown in this, it is only fair to believe that America will accept skirts with trains.

Skirts Laid in Fine Plaids.
Not only Collet, but several others of the designers have indulged with en-but will be pulled up to the brim of the hat in the back, and up across the chin in front.

To see just such a collar at a smart fashion opening is like regarding a lightning-change artist. It hangs to the waist, it mounts to the crown of the head, it is thrown around the neck twice like a muffler, and it is sharply pointed at each ear and sedately drawn across the breast to form a kerchief.

Winter Footwear.

The shops are well supplied with footwear and, on the whole, it is a most satisfactory sort of stock that is shown. It is not very much different from that of last year. The better sort of shoe dealers is not showing frillish models and there are few of the eccentricities such as buck heels and openwork over the instep, that marked some of last winter's footwear. On the whole, though, those oddities did not find favor with the better-dressed women. For her, there is not much change in the footwear outlook.

High boots, between seven and eight inches high, and about the same in height as those of last year, will be used for street wear, although pumps and spats will be worn to some extent. The high boots will be largely buttoned, for many of them are of course for skating and other sports. The flat heel will be the rule.

The Flat Heel.
There is a new heel, and, although high heels for dress will be usual, the new heel, which is only a little over an inch high, is used on many street shoes. It is an admirable heel for walking and doubtless we have the huge for sports clothes to thank for its appearance. It is used on shoes daintily cut, so that now it is no longer necessary to wear a rough, huge boot if we would get a low, straight heel. Just as excusers are now made of silk and sports frocks of chiffon, so straight, low heels are put on boots with dainty toes and ankles.

As for the high heels, the in-curved Louise heel to which we have become so accustomed, is used on all evening shoes and slippers, and on

One of the best models built in this manner is of pearl gray satin cloth, the entire skirt of which is laid in eight-inch plaits and a glittering cuirass bodice made of gray net, heavily embroidered in silver threads and gray silk floss.

Mme. Paquin has herself created an exceedingly good-looking street suit of velvet, in that rich, warm tone once known as drags of wine. The skirt is laid in two-inch plaits with a flatty ornamented hem, and the jacket is nipped in sharply in two places at the waist to allow the material to sag over it; the wide right front is carried over the figure at neck and waist. This coat does not extend more than three or four inches below the normal waistline, and the top of it is finished with one of those new collars that wrap around the neck like a muffler; it is made of a bright, warm tone of red velvet edged with gray rabbit.

The New Draped Collars.
This story of clothes is too far advanced to go deeply into the subject of the draped collars of the hour, but just a word to put you on the sharp lookout for them. The American designers call them Guardsmen's capes; the French designers name them after the Revolution, but on neither continent have they ever been worn. They will be worn this winter. They will no longer remain over the shoulders.

Colored Shoes.
Although the highly elaborate shoes of last year had a deserved death, shoes are by no means plain. We have grown fond of combinations of leather, of different colors and of novel effects in our footwear. So, of course, we get these things from the shoe manufacturers.

The bright colors, however, are no longer used. Brown, tan, gray, black and white are all much used, and they are often strikingly combined. The patent-leather wrap of black is smartly applied to the gray or tan cloth top. Heavy tan calves' skin is used with a washable tan kid top, and cloth tops of gray and tan suede tops and buckskin tops are all used with glazed kid vamps.

As for the evening slippers, broadened to be the smartest material for them. And its characteristic mark of smartness will be a silver thread running through all its wealth of colors. Plain silver slippers, too, without other color, will be used, and both black and white satin slippers will also be worn.

Coats for Traveling.
Traveling coats are being made of very thick rough-surfaced materials, heavy rough serge, thick velvets, dahlia or jersey cloth. The jersey cloths for winter wraps and suits appear under various names, such as winter jersey, "tricho double," and the like. Almost all of the new coat models have a wide belt, catching in the fullness at the front, but leaving the back loose. They also have enormous pockets. In one of the shops was exhibited a smart garment of this description in velours delaine with pockets placed quite high and coming from under the arms from these pockets started plaits, giving fullness to the coat, which had no belt.

Drinking of Water A PROMINENT WOMAN OF WISCONSIN

The general conclusions of the latest Medical Scientists proves that drinking plenty of pure water both between meals and with one's meals is beneficial to health. It has now been proven by means of the X-rays and actual tests upon many healthy young men that the drinking of large amounts of water with meals is often beneficial. Therefore if you want to keep healthy drink plenty of pure water (not tea water), both with your meals and between meals. If you ever suffer from backache, lumbago, rheumatism, or any of the symptoms of kidney trouble—such as deep colored urine, sediment in urine, getting out of bed at night frequently and other troublesome effects, take a little Anuric before meals. These Anuric Tablets can be obtained at almost any drug store.

COULDN'T BREAK UP SYSTEM

Johnson Preferred to Get Wet Rather Than Disturb the Routine He Had Established.

Johnson is a great believer in system. He cuts system, breathes system, thinks system, talks system and sleeps systematically. His rule of living is as exact and unyielding as the rule of three. On the first day of the twelve-day clock he rises from his bed, on the second day he closes the lid, on the third he is darning his overcoat and hat, and the twelfth stroke finds him on the sidewalk proceeding toward work.

The other day a friend observed him walking toward home in a hard rain from which he was entirely unprotected by raincoat or umbrella.

"Hey, Johnson!" cried the friend, "haven't you any umbrella?"

"Yes, two of them," was the reply. "Why in thunder don't you use one of them, then?"

"Well, you see it's this way: I've made it a rule to keep one umbrella at the office and one at home, so that I'd be sure always to have one at either end of the line when it rains. If I should take one now from the office to my home, they'd both be at my home, don't you see, and that'd break up my system."

MAY MAKE SOAP FROM LEMONS.

The humble lemon-juice, of which great quantities are every year accumulated by Australian lemon-squash manufacturers, appears likely to earn respect as an article of commercial value. The federal analyst has recently furnished a report to the effect that the dried pulp contain a large proportion of oil.

By other extractions the yield of oil was 23 per cent, and by extraction with petroleum benzine 21 per cent. The oil obtained from the pulp is clear, of pale-straw color, wholly saponifiable, and has slight but rather persistent bitter taste.

Possibly the oil expressed from the pulp by direct hot pressing would not possess a bitter taste; if so, it would be of value for edible purposes, and, being wholly saponifiable, could, as an alternative, be used for soap-making.

Here is a better rubber boot than Father ever owned—it is a "HIPRESS"

WITH THE RED LINE 'ROUND THE TOP

Father wore black boots. So did you until about 8 years ago when—after spending $1,000,000—perfect "HIPRESS" Brown Boots, made the new way, like a Goodrich Auto Tire, out of tough new auto tire rubber. Dad's boots never wore out so long—rather do other makers are worn out with "HIPRESS" because a "HIPRESS" boot is one solid wear-resisting piece. All styles—$8,000 dealers.

The ORIGINAL Brown Rubber Boots and Heavy Shoes

20,000,000 pairs sold without advertising—that's how good Goodrich "STRAIGHT-LINE" Rubbers are!

The rubber in them is tough, almost, as rawhide. It wears twice as long as the rubber others use. And "STRAIGHT-LINE" is snug, feet light and look neat. They are everything that a man, woman or child could desire, that is why 20,000,000 pairs were sold on merit alone—without advertising. At 38,000 stores.

Bacteria have killed more people in the world's history than bullets. Most wars are preventable—so also are most diseases. "Preparedness" is the watchword to avoid the horror of war; "pastorization" is the master word to avoid the dangers in milk. It is quite as important to guard against invisible germs that may contaminate our food as it is to guard against hostile armies and navies. So far as milk is concerned we have an efficient method of protection in pasteurization. Pasteurization is the simplest, cheapest and best method of spiking the 42 centimeter sun of the foci found in milk. Therefore, the sanitarian naturally connects preparedness and protection with pasteurization.

Pasteurization is such a simple procedure that it may be done on any kitchen stove. However, it is better to have the milk pasteurized in a scientific manner in a well equipped dairy where the process may be carried out accurately under skilled supervision. Pasteurized milk means nothing more nor less than heated milk. The object of heating the milk is to destroy the harmful germs that may be in it. It is not necessary to heat the milk too high. The temperature should not exceed 65 degrees centigrade for a longer period than forty-five minutes. This temperature and time afford a sufficient factor of safety. If the milk is heated below 60 degrees centigrade or for less than twenty minutes, no security is afforded. Properly pasteurized milk is, therefore, safe milk, in fact, the only safe milk.

The sanitarian favors the more general use of milk, for it is one of the complete food known and alone is capable of sustaining life for an indefinite period. This would not be possible with any other single food stuff. For example, we could not maintain health and vigor on a diet of meat alone or fat alone or oatmeal alone. In other words, milk makes a complete meal in itself. Milk should not be regarded as a beverage. It is a food. Adults and growing school children will sometimes drink several glasses of milk with a full meal in order to quench thirst. To use milk in this way in place of water is a mistake, for it causes ill results from over-eating.

Milk is not only one of the most nutritious, but is one of the most easily digestible foods. Fortunately, pasteurized milk is just as nutritious and just as digestible as raw milk. Householders should be careful to see that the milk they receive is clean, cold, fresh and pasteurized.

RUDOLPH

The remains of Eugene Marceau were brought to this place Saturday afternoon from Stevens Point, where he died early in the morning, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Delphine Whitman. The remains were taken to the Catholic church, where a requiem mass was held and the body laid to rest in the cemetery by the side of his wife and son. The deceased was well known throughout the county, having lived hereabouts for fifty years. He was survived by one daughter, three sons and twenty grandchildren. He also leaves a brother, who lives in Canada. Eugene was born in Quebec, Canada, November 7, 1832. He came to this country about 55 years ago and settled in Fond du Lac county, and after being there a few years he came to Wood County and was married to Miss Mary Richards. He served in the Civil War and was an old riverman, having run the river for many years. The sympathy of the community is extended to the bereaved relatives.

Mrs. Whitman of Stevens Point is spending several days this week at the home of her brother.

ONE POTATO CROP PAYS $20,000 MORTGAGE OFF

New York, Nov. 9.—Henry Cross of Holmdel is probably the greatest single gainer in the agricultural prosperity enjoyed by Monmouth county, N. J. farmers this year. He has just paid off a mortgage of $20,000 on his farm with the money he made on his potato crop this year. The farm comprises 230 acres, and on 80 acres Cross raised 9,200 barrels of potatoes, an average of over 110 barrels to the acre. The heaviest yield was from a seven-acre field, from which were gathered 1,066 barrels.

Pasteurization is such a simple procedure that it may be done on any kitchen stove. However, it is better to have the milk pasteurized in a scientific manner in a well equipped dairy where the process may be carried out accurately under skilled supervision. Pasteurized milk means nothing more nor less than heated milk. The object of heating the milk is to destroy the harmful germs that may be in it. It is not necessary to heat the milk too high. The temperature should not exceed 65 degrees centigrade for a longer period than forty-five minutes. This temperature and time afford a sufficient factor of safety. If the milk is heated below 60 degrees centigrade or for less than twenty minutes, no security is afforded. Properly pasteurized milk is, therefore, safe milk, in fact, the only safe milk.

The sanitarian favors the more general use of milk, for it is one of nature's most valuable foods. Milk is the complete food known and alone is capable of sustaining life for an indefinite period. This would be possible for a longer period than food stuff. For example, we could not maintain health and vigor on a diet of meat alone or fat alone, or oatmeal alone. Milk contains the essential ingredients found in meat, fat and oatmeal. In other words, milk makes a complete meal in itself. Milk should not be regarded as a beverage. It is a food. Athletes and growing school children will sometimes drink several glasses of milk with a full meal in order to quench thirst. To use milk in this way in place of water is a mistake, for it causes ill resulting from over-eating.

Milk is not only one of the most nutritious, but is one of the most easily digestible foods. Fortunately, pasteurized milk is just as nutritious and just as digestible as raw milk. Homeholders should be careful to see that the milk they receive is clean, cold, fresh and pasteurized.

RUDOLPH

The remains of Eugene Marceau were brought to this place Saturday afternoon from Stevens Point, where he died early in the morning, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Delphine Whitman. The remains lay at the house of Mrs. K. J. Marceau until 9 o'clock Monday morning when they were taken to the Catholic church, where a religious mass was held and the body laid to rest in the cemetery by the side of his wife who died some seven years ago last August. The deceased was well known throughout the county, having lived here for many years. He was survived by one daughter, Mrs. Delphine Whitman, and two sons, who live in Canada. Deceased was born in Quebec, Canada, November 17, 1832. He came to this country about 55 years ago and settled in Grand Rapids, and after being here a few years he came to Wood County and was married to Miss Mary Marceau. He served in the Civil War and was an old riverman, having "run the river" for many years. The sympathy of the community is extended to the bereaved relatives.

ONE POTATO CROP PAYS $20,000 MORTGAGE OFF

New York, Nov. 9.—Henry Cross of Holmdel is probably the greatest single gainer in the agricultural prosperity enjoyed by Monmouth county, N. J. farmers this year. He has just paid off a mortgage of $20,000 on his farm with the money he made on his potato crop this year. The farm comprises 230 acres, and on 8 acres Cross raised 9,200 barrels of potatoes an average of over 110 barrels to the acre. The heaviest yield was from a seven-acre field, from which were gathered 1,066 barrels.

GIRL SCALPED BY SEPARATOR
Antigo, Wis., Nov. 2. Brains of hair caught in a cream separator caused the scalping of Osea Briggs, 13 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Briggs, in the town of Redine.
The girl is suffering from concussion of the brain. At times she is unconscious. It is thought that she will not die.
Osea was working in the basement of her home. She had just finished separating the cream and was turning away to run upstairs and get ready for school. In whirling about her beautiful long braids of golden hair were bounced into the wheel of the machine which was still revolving.
It ripped her scalp from the base of her skull to her forehead and would have pulled it off entirely were it not that the hair broke and pulled out. She was thrown to the concrete floor and struck her head violently. The scene attracted her parents and they found her unconscious.
The girl was taken to the hospital at Antigo.

NEWS NOTES FROM WISCONSIN PLACES
Machine Thins: The days of big pine trees have not altogether passed away, although "big timber" stories are as frequent in this locality as they were once upon a time. Two pine trees were recently cut at camp 3 of the Hudson Lumber Log & Timber Co., west of the city, that reached 70,000 feet. Seven logs were obtained from one of the trees alone. The logs were all of unusual soundness and quality, something that is not very often found in this section now days.
Wagon Sam: Conservation Warden M. C. Thoma was ordered to go to Lima at once and destroy beaver dams near there which are causing damage. At one place a section of logging road which had been built for use the coming winter is reported to have been flooded to a depth of three and one-half feet, making its use impossible. The dams are to be destroyed and beaver ponds will be the next operations have been completed next spring. The timber belongs to Patrick Gorman of this city and is to be logged by Charles Tevie.
John Newiar, a brakeman of Adams, was arrested Tuesday for receiving and concealing stolen goods, John Peterson of Adams being the complaining witness. Last week some articles were stolen out of Mr. Peterson's automobile and garage. Newiar offered to tell Peterson where the goods were for a reward, and took him in back of the Commercial Hotel, where the articles were buried. Peterson then caused his arrest upon the charge as stated, and he was brought before Judge Kees Wednesday. He pleaded not guilty and was bound over to circuit court. He was taken to Portage today by Sheriff John Hobart and Deputy Sheriff Sullivan to await trial.—Adams County Press.

Nekoosa Tribune: Herman Polansky, aged 76, died at his home in Nekoosa Wednesday evening, November 1st, at 9:10 o'clock. Deceased was born in Germany October 26, 1849, and came to America with his parents in 1856. He was one of the pioneer settlers in Wood county. In 1877 he moved to New Rome, Adams county, where he lived for 38 years, coming to Nekoosa eleven years ago. He leaves to mourn his loss, his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Della Anderson of Waupun and Mrs. Nettie Larson of Ashland; one son, Carl of Nekoosa three sisters, Mrs. A. L. Gross and Mrs. W. Scott of Grand Rapids, Wis., and Mrs. A. Aulhouse of New Rome, Wis. The funeral services were held Saturday morning at 10:00 o'clock at the home with interment at the New Rome cemetery, Rev. C. A. O'Neill officiating.

The Soo line has been bothered considerably by beavers which have been constructing a dam near the tracks about a mile and a half south of Westboro. This dam has raised the water so high that the tracks are liable to be washed out. The state conservation commission will send the state game warden to the scene to destroy the dam and kill the beavers. The railroad company has also been bothered with beavers near Weymouth where the animal have been building dams. The dams at this place had also been torn out and their building obstructed several times. At present they have a small dam there. The beavers always do their work at night and are hard to locate during the day. After the dam of the tracks has been destroyed the animals will not use the old material again to build another but will use all new material.

Marshfield Herald: A sad accident happened Monday afternoon, resulting in the death of Joseph Zilk, Jr., a few hours after its occurrence. The parents of the boy, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Zilk, reside at 804 West Western street. On the day of the accident, Joseph was driving his father's team which was hitched to a heavy truck. He was proceeding north on the new paved street leading to the hospital. When within three blocks of the hospital a sudden jerk of the truck sent him and his father forward over the end of the planks on which he was standing. He struck with his head on the pavement, the wheels of the truck passing over his body. Medical aid was summoned but was of no help. After the accident a fall on the pavement fractured his skull and the heavy wheels of the truck inflicted internal injuries which ended in death at 5 p. m. the same day. Joseph was a bright, trustworthy boy and his sudden and tragic death is deeply mourned by his parents and associates.

Shot by a heavy gauged shot gun in the hands of her brother, Jerked over forty miles of rough northern Wisconsin roads in an automobile, Fanny Ondirk, 34 years old, lived until she was in the midst of an operation in a hospital at Ashland. Then she succumbed. Fannie was the only daughter of Ignatz Ondirk, farmer living near Ashland hospital. Her brother, August, Saturday afternoon told the story of the accident in which he killed his only sister, as follows: "I was cleaning my shot-gun. I didn't know it was loaded. Fannie was standing right beside me. Then the gun went off. To my surprise the charge struck her in the right side. She fell to the floor of the house immediately unconscious. We gave her first aid treatment and then packed her into a gasoline car and sped toward the Ashland hospital. The distance is all of forty miles. In some places the roads are terrible. I was holding Annie in my arms and I thought that any moment she might die. It seemed that every jerk of the car would prove fatal. Well, finally we won the race with death, but the prize was lost in the hospital."

THE GOOD JUDGE GETS POSITIVE INFORMATION.

JEREMY DO YOU KNOW OF A CONTENTED MAN AROUND THIS LUMBER CAMP?

NO IT SURE! ITS MY FRIEND MURPHY. HE'LL TELL YOU WHO THE REAL CHEW AND I DON'T HAVE TO DISLOCATE MY JAW TO GET SATISFACTION.

JUST put it up to a gentlemanly fellow and watch him take the tobacco that calls for a small sized chew. A few facts like these appeal to his common sense:—
W-B CUT Chewing is rich tobacco. It's shredded, you get next to all the good tobacco taste. The touch of salt helps bring out the flavor. It's not sweetened and flavored to death—you don't have to keep grinding and spitting.

WHERE ARE THE HEIRS OF JAMES BONNER?

The following letter, which explains itself, has been received by Mayor Ellis and in order to give it proper publicity the mayor has turned it over to the newspapers of the city.

The Mayor of Grand Rapids, Grand Rapids, Wisconsin.

Dear Sir: We are trying to locate the relatives of James Bonner, deceased, who died about two years ago in this county. At one time many years ago he conducted a restaurant in this city on Reed street across from the old Union or St. Paul depot. We understand that he had an adopted son. We do not know whether the adoption was a legal adoption or not, but the name of this adopted son was William Bonner, and he married a daughter of a man who conducted a hotel in your city. The purpose of this letter is to bring the matter to the attention of the newspapers of your city. Will you kindly give the same whatever publicity you are able. Mr. Bonner left a small estate, and we are trying to locate relatives.

Thanking you in advance for the favor, we are,

Very truly yours,
Rowan, Kallaher & Stocker.

CRANBERRIES MOVING

M. O. Potter, who has been out to the marsh of late where he has been cleaning up and shipping the season's crop of berries, reports that the last of the berries were shipped out on Monday, which is considerable earlier than was done last year. It was thought earlier in the season that the crop would not move very fast this year, as there was a great shortage of cars early in the season, and it was expected that when the time came for shipping none would be available. However, when they did commence to come there was an abundance, and the result is that the crop was moved earlier than usual.

But extra inches in an automobile cost hundreds of dollars—as a rule.

It took an investment of millions in facilities for tremendously increased production—

To effect the economies necessary to produce luxurious size at this price.

The wheelbase is 112 inches—

The seats are comfortable and roomy and there's plenty of leg room front and back.

And your further luxurious comfort is assured by cantilever springs, big four-inch tires and balanced weight—the gasoline tank is at the rear.

Beautifully finished!—every convenience!!

Price $795!!!

Model 85-6, six cylinder, 35-40 horsepower, 116-inch wheelbase—$925.

WHERE ARE THE HEIRS OF JAMES BONNER?

The following letter, which explains itself, has been received by Mayor Ellis and in order to give it proper publicity the mayor has turned it over to the newspapers of the city:

The Mayor of Grand Rapids, Grand Rapids, Wisconsin.

Dear Sir:

We are trying to locate the relatives of James Bonner, deceased, who died about two years ago in this county. At one time many years ago he conducted a restaurant in this city on Reed street across from the old Union or St. Paul depot. We understand that he had an adopted son. We do not know whether the adoption was a legal adoption or not but the name of this adopted son was William Bonner, and he married a daughter of a man who conducted a hotel in your city. The purpose of this letter is to bring the matter to the attention of the newspapers of your city. Will you kindly give the same whatever publicity you are able. Mr. Bonner left a small estate, and we are trying to locate relatives.

Thanking you in advance for the favor, we are,

Very truly yours,
Rowan, Kalaher & Stocker.

CRANBERRIES MOVING

M. O. Potter, who has been out to the marsh of late where he has been cleaning up and shipping the season's crop of berries, reports that the last of the berries were shipped out on Monday, which is considerable earlier than was done last year. It was thought earlier in the season that the crop would not move very fast this year, as there was a great shortage of cars early in the season, and it was expected that when the time came for shipping none would be available. However, when they did commence to come there was an abundance, and the result is that the crop was moved earlier than usual.

WILL HOLD HEARINGS

A representative of the Industrial Commission will be in this city on the 10th and 11th of November for the purpose of holding hearings on a number of cases that will come up at that time. Among the cases that will be heard at that time are the following:

Citizen Building by Civic Training in the Schools

Prof. Wilson Gill proposes to prepare our native and foreign born children for the duties of self-government so that we may have a nation honestly and efficiently and justly conducted

THE presence of large numbers of foreign workers in many parts of the United States—persons who do not understand our laws, our language, our forms of government in city, state and nation—is full of danger for the country. The lack of interest in civic affairs by a large proportion of our own educated American population is another big danger, taken especially in relation to the presence here of the outsiders.

Many of the industrial towns and cities in New England and in other parts of the country have populations almost half foreign. There is frequent rioting with attendant loss of lives and destruction of property. The spirit of mob lawlessness of this sort seems to be spreading in many communities.

On the other hand, we find dishonest government—plain graft, but administration of law, representative officials who do not represent the mass of taxpayers, in practically every city and state in America. Many agencies have sought the cause of this state of affairs and are hunting a remedy.

The chief cause of the foreign unrest and lawlessness appears to be ignorance. Only a very small percentage of the rough labor which has come to us from Europe can speak or understand the language of the country. Practically none has any idea whatever of our laws, our standard of living, our governmental methods.

And the great cause of dishonesty in government in our towns, cities and states appears to be the indifference of the great mass of intelligent, prosperous American citizens to what goes on right under their noses. They don't take the trouble to vote. They don't take the trouble to participate in primaries and conventions and see to it that good men are nominated for office. They leave it all to the politicians, who are in the governing business—so called—not because of their fitness to administer laws, spend public money, deal out justice, etc., for the good of the community, but simply and purely for what they can get out of it. Just graft for themselves and their friends.

Civic Training in Schools.

In a recent article in the Philadelphia Public Ledger, Prof. Wilson L. Gill, who was put in charge of the school system of Cuba during the American occupation of that island after the Spanish-American war, offers a single remedy for both these dangers to the peace and happiness and well-being of the United States.

"Education," he says, "builds citizens by giving them civic training in the schools. Beginning with the tots in the primary grades, teach the boys and girls how their school, their town, their country, their state, their nation is conducted. Teach them to vote and decide the little problems of their daily lives in the schoolroom by methods employed in government.

"Make each schoolroom, for instance, a little town. Let the pupils under the teacher's supervision elect a mayor from among their number and have all the others compose a board of councilmen. Put up to them problems of school, town, country, state, national management, to be decided on the principles of justice and the safety and well-being of the majority.

"A proper appeal must be made to the pupils," Professor Gill says, "and they must be enlisted heartily.

"This is easily done, for we have good material to work with. Nearly all boys and girls are essentially good. This is true, even if, by reason of an unfortunate environment, a child has developed some very bad habits, even those of dishonesty. If the appeal is properly made to them, they can be counted on definitely to stand for that which is honest, fair and square, clean, generous and right.

Teacher's Part of the Plan.

"Personal and printed assistance must be given to them for carrying on their government in the spirit of American institutions and in accord with correct civic forms, to maintain order and develop co-operation and efficiency for every good purpose. They must be shown how to solve the problems of their daily intercourse, and, as their teachers help them to become independent in solving the problems in arithmetic, so their teachers must help them to become independent in solving their daily problems of social and civic relations. The teacher's part in the use of this laboratory method of moral and civic training is the same as in mathematics. The teacher's authority and responsibility in both cases are to encourage and help the pupils to keep up enthusiasm, to become independent and judicial in thought and to arrive at clear-cut decisions. At that point the old educational process, as in mathematics, ends, but in this new laboratory work, dealing with the actual practical problems of daily moral and civic life, there is another most important step, which is immediately to put these decisions into execution and to co-operate for the good of all.

"What is needed for introducing democracy in schools?

"First—The right method—there is one, the laboratory method, and there cannot be another.

"Second—Practical plans—there can be but one right general plan, but of this there may be innumerable variations.

"Third—A person skilled in introducing the method and supervising the use of it.

"Fourth—Authority for such introduction and supervising.

WILSON L. GILL, LL. B.

The Right Method.

"Since citizenship and government are matters of action, as well as of knowledge, the method of teaching them must be the laboratory method, by which the pupil learns how to do a thing by doing it. In this respect citizenship is like swimming, which must be learned by practice in swimming; or carpentry, which must be learned by working under the direction of a carpenter. Citizenship must be learned by performing the right actions of citizenship and by maintaining the right spirit of citizenship, as well as by learning accidentally the facts of the subject.

"The first essential of a correct plan for teaching American citizenship is that it shall be in accord with the spirit of American institutions, which is expressed by the Golden Rule, in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. For instance, it must assure equal rights and justice to all, and, of course, must not give special privileges or establish class distinctions, as in ancient Rome and Greece, strong traces of which still remain in our country.

"The second essential is that so far as the school government is developed, it shall be run parallel with some correct form of American government among adults, and give no wrong ideas to pupils, with the thought that they can be easily corrected later. It ought to follow, as nearly as practicable, the plan of keeping reasonably separate the legislative, executive and judicial elements of government. What the form of government is, if it is true to American civics, may not be a serious question. The most simple form is that in which there are three officers, one at the head of the legislative department, another of the executive, and the third of the judicial. The three officers may be added those of clerks, librarians, health, peace and other officers.

Schoolroom the Unit.

"It is a good practice to consider the schoolroom, under the instruction of a teacher, as the unit of organization, rather than several rooms under the principal of the school. The former plan tends toward a permanent and thorough use of the method, the latter to the dropping of the method in case the principal falls ill or leaves the school. The schoolroom government may follow the plan of the locality in which it is situated. If it is in a city, it may be well to follow the general plan of the city, with a mayor, judge and president of the council, all the pupils being the council, or legislative body, though it would be undesirable and impossible to reproduce all the details of a large city government. If the school is in a town, the schoolroom government should in form be that of a town; but as towns turn into cities, and people go from towns to live in cities, it is good practice, where town government is used part of the year, to use the city form the other part of the year. It is desirable to have elections as frequently as four times in the school year, that as many as practicable may enjoy the moral and educational benefit of being elected and of carrying the responsibility of the offices.

INVENTS A PIANO TYPEWRITER

Bernard Dareski will shortly introduce to England the most wonderful invention in the world of musical mechanics since the coming of the automatic player piano. It is a piano typewriter which reproduces in ordinary musical notation whatever the performer plays. A pianist can make a copy of any piece of music by merely playing it through. By the insertion of carbon papers half a dozen copies may be made in one operation, as with an ordinary typewriter. The inventor is an Italian.—London Daily Express.

Possible, of Course.

Possibly some married men wonder around at night for the purpose of confining themselves that there is no place like home.

Worried Small Girl.

One day little Katherine was playing in front of her home when she noticed a man on a telegraph post fixing some wires. She called up to him, "Man, ain't you afraid you'll fall down?" He replied, "No, I won't fall." Then she said, "Some day you will." After a moment's thought she again called to him, "Does your mamma know you're up there?"

Its Pitiless Publicity.

Another serious trouble with a typewriter is that it always prints the letter one strikes whether that is the right letter or not.—Chicago News.

In many cases it is desirable to have elections much more frequently.

"Several schoolroom governments may be joined in a school state and several states in a school national government, to look after matters which pertain to the whole school. It is possible and practicable to go still further, and join these school national governments in a federation. The teacher helps the pupils to become independent in solving their social and civic problems as he does the problems of mathematics. Each pupil is continually exercised in independent thinking, judicial conclusion and immediate action. To take the initiative soon becomes habitual. Co-operation for every good purpose is developed and team work becomes the ordinary practice. The teacher's authority is not weakened but strengthened by the co-operation of the pupils in their democratic republic.

"If we were to look upon this matter as if it were a mill, the mill would serve no purpose unless it should have grist to grind, and in this case the grist is the government of the children's conduct to suggest useful and constructive activities for the good of each child and the community of pupils and of the entire community of which the children are a part. The pupils' time, mind and energy being fully occupied doing right constructive things, the amount of wrongdoing drops to an almost negligible quantity. What there is of this is dealt with by the children in their own courts more effectively than is possible by any other means in the reach of the teachers, even if corporal punishment is permitted, which is prohibited by law in some places.

"It is not to be supposed that the children can handle these social and civic problems without the same kind of interest and assistance by the teachers that is necessary for success in any other school work; nor that the teachers can make the best use of this laboratory method of moral and civic training without the co-operation of the children's parents, and, until the teachers have become well accustomed to the new method, they need the suggestions of one who has had large experience in its use.

Co-ordinates With Other Studies.

"Does this not add another burden to the teacher's already too heavy load? No. It organizes the co-operation of the pupils to help the teachers bear their burdens. Does it take the time of a recitation each day or once a week? No, but it co-ordinates with other studies such as English, civics and history, and is that good spirit which proves to be a lubricant for all recitations, for all the machinery of the school, and releases the teachers from police duty, enabling them to give their whole time, strength and nervous force to teaching, uninterrupted by misconduct and idleness. Relieved of the ordinary pull on the nerves and drain of one's vital strength, helping the children to develop their own character and to use the tools and processes of education for their own salvation, the teacher's work becomes exhilarating and a joy."

Egyptian Calendar.

The Egyptians were a very practical people and only went so far with a science as it had a very definite, everyday application. Quite early in the lunar month appeared a poor, standard for the measurement of time, and the year was divided, therefore, into 12 months of 30 days each, and the five remaining days were made feast days. This calendar was established as early as 4241 B. C.

Resorted to Formality.

Edward had just come to visit at grandpa's house. Grandma had spent some weeks at his home and he was quite accustomed to speaking her name. A few evenings since his grandfather came in from the office and immediately the older members of the family proceeded vociferously to relate an interesting incident of the day. At the same time Edward was trying eagerly to attract his attention. His repeated "gumpa, gumpa," brought no results and, with desperate earnestness, he called out: "Mister Gramma!"

FEATURES OF NEW FASHIONS

Paris insists on Detached Trains of Velvet for the Frocks for Evening Wear.

AGAIN THE PLAITED SKIRT

Is a Favorite Worn With Long-Waisted Straight Bodice of Metal Embroidered Net—Draped Collars Will Be Largely Worn This Winter—Footwear.

New York.—All the French clothes of importance have arrived. From now on, the decision for failure or success will be left to the public.

The new gowns have detached trains of embroidered velvet lined with a contrasting color of satin, and sometimes partly lined with fur, in medieval fashion. Detachable is an immense attractive evening frock of oxidized gray net, heavily embroidered with tarnished silver roses dropped over flesh pink satin, with a part of the bodice and the sides and back of the skirt which extends into a long train made of double red velvet.

The balance of dignity in the new fashion is thrown on the side of the long evening skirt with the train, but a remnant of the present fashion is in a short line across the exact front of the skirt. No French designer seems to have considered whether the skirt was long or moderately short, however, in placing a train on it. When there is so much uniformity of opinion among the French houses as is shown in this, it is only fair to believe that America will accept skirts with trains.

Skirts Laid in Fine Plaits.

Not only Chloé, but several others of the designers have indulged with en-

but will be pulled up to the brim of the hat in the back, and up and across the chin in front.

To see just such a collar at a smart fashion opening is like regarding a lightning-change artist. It hangs to the waist, it mounts to the crown of the head, it is thrown around the neck twice like a muffler, and it is sharply pointed at each ear and sedately drawn across the breast to form a kerchief.

Winter Footwear.

The shops are well supplied with footwear and, on the whole, it is a most satisfactory sort of stock that is shown. It is not very much different from that of last year. The better sort of shoe dealers is not showing freakish models and there are few of the eccentricities, such as back lacing and openwork over the instep, that marked some of last winter's footwear.

On the whole, though, those oddities did not find favor with the better dressed woman. For her, there is not much change in the footwear outlook. High boots, between seven and eight inches high, and about the same in height as those of last year, will be used for street wear, although pumps and spats will be worn to some extent. The high boots will be largely buttoned, for dress wear, but, of course, for skating and other sports laced boots will be the rule.

The Flat Heel.

There is a new heel and, although high heels for dress will be usual, the new heel, which is only a little over an inch high, is used on many street shoes. It is an admirable heel for walking and doubtless will have the rage for sports clothes to thank for its appearance. It is used on shoes dutifully cut, so that now it is no longer necessary to wear a rough, huge boot. If we would get a low, straight heel, just as sweaters are now made of silk and sports frocks of chiffon, so straight low heels are put on boots with delicate toes and ankles.

As for the high heels, the in-curved Louise heel to which we have become so accustomed, is used on all evening shoes and slippers, and on

One of the best models of this in this manner is of pearl gray satin cloth, the entire skirt of which is laid in eight-inch plaits and a glittering cuirass bodice made of gray net, heavily embroidered in silver threads and gray silk floss.

Mme. Paquin has herself created an exceedingly good-looking street suit of velvet, in that rich, warm tone once known as dregs of wine. The skirt is laid in two-inch plaits with a fairly ornamented hem, and the jacket is slipped in sharply in two places at the back to allow the material to sag over it; the wide right front is carried well across the figure at neck and waist.

This coat does not extend more than three or four inches below the normal waistline, and the top of it is finished with one of those new collars that wrap around the neck like a muffler; it is made of a bright, warm tone of red velvet edged with gray rabbit.

The New Draped Collars.

This story of clothes is too far advanced to go deeply into the subject of the draped collars of the hour, but just a word to put you on the sharp lookout for them. The American designers call the new collars the French revolution, and the gray is taken up by France because of the second morning which many of the European women wore this summer. This is also the reason for the introduction of purple.

Brown will be worn in several shades, many of which are easy to carry off by the average woman, but one of which—mustard yellow, which is the height of fashion—is exceedingly difficult. It will be unfortunate, indeed, if a large number of women take up this trying shade through the absurd idea that fashion overcomes ugliness.

Autumn gowns and suits are made of it in satin and wool jersey, also cloth, but the woman who refuses to have her appearance likened to a mustard plaster shows sufficient sense to have a host of followers.

Coats for Traveling.

Traveling coats are being made of very thick rough-surfaced materials, heavy rough serge, thick velours, de-laine or Jersey cloth. The jersey coats for winter wraps and suits appear under various names, such as winter jersey, "tricho double" and the like.

Almost all of the new coat models have a wide belt, catching in the fullness at the front, but leaving the back loose. They also have enormous pockets. In one of the shops was exhibited a smart garment of this description in velours de-laine with pockets placed quite high and coming from under the arms from these pockets started plaits, giving fullness to the coat, which had no belt.

Drinking of Water A PROMINENT WOMAN OF WISCONSIN

The general conclusions of the latest medical Scientists prove that drinking plenty of pure water both between meals and with one's meals is beneficial to health. It has now been proven by means of the X-rays and actual tests upon many healthy young men that the drinking of large amounts of water with meals is often beneficial. Therefore if you want to keep healthy drink plenty of pure water (not tea or coffee, both with your meals and between meals. If you ever suffer from backache, lumbago, rheumatism, or any of the symptoms of kidney trouble—such as deep colored urine, sediment in urine, getting out of bed at night frequently and other troublesome effects, take a little Anuric before meals. These Anuric Tablets can be obtained at almost any drug store.

Appleton, Wis.—"I found Dr. Pierce's 'Favorit' for the prescription to be very good. About six years ago I had a womanly weakness. I took this medicine and it cured me in about six months. I am quite sure it is a permanent cure, as I have never felt any return of this ailment and am well and hearty as any one could wish to be. I can recommend the 'Prescription' very highly."—MRS. C. M. JOHNSON PREFERRED TO GET WET RATHER THAN DISTURB THE ROUTINE HE HAD ESTABLISHED.

Johnson is a great believer in system. He cuts system, broaches system, thinks system, talks system and sleeps systematically. His rule of living is as exact and unyielding as the rule of three. On the first tap of the twelve-o'clock bell he rises from his bed, on the second tap he closes the lid, on the third he is donning his overcoat and hat, and the twelfth stroke finds him on the sidewalk proceeding laudably.

The other day a friend observed him walking toward home in a land rain from which he was entirely unprotected by raincoat or umbrella.

"Hey, Johnson!" cried the friend, "haven't you any umbrella?" "Yes, two of them," was the reply. "Why in thunder don't you use one of them, then?"

"Well, you see it's this way: I've made it a rule to keep one umbrella at the office and one at home, so that I'd be sure always to have one at either end of the line when it rains. If I should take one now from the office to my home, they'd both be at my home, don't you see, and that'd break up my system."

May Make Soap From Lemons.

The humble lemon, of which great quantities are every year accumulated by Australian lemon-squash manufacturers, appears likely to earn respect as an article of commercial value. The Federal analyst has recently furnished a report to the effect that the dried pips contain a large proportion of oil.

By ether extractions the yield of oil was 23 per cent, and by extraction with petroleum benzine 21 per cent. The oil obtained from the pips is clear, of pale-straw color, wholly sapid, and has slight but rather persistent bitter.

Justly the oil expressed from the pips by direct hot pressing would not possess a bitter taste; if so, it would be of value for edible purposes, and, being wholly sapid, could, as an alternative, be used for soap-making.

Here is a better rubber boot than Father ever owned—it is a "HIPRESS"

WITH THE RED LINE 'ROUND THE TOP

Father wore black boots. So did you until about 3 years ago when Goodrich—after spending $1,000,000—perfected "HIPRESS" Brown Boots, made the easy way, like a Goodrich Auto Tire, out of tough new auto tire rubber. Dad's boots never wore half so long—neither do other make's even today—compare with "HIPRESS" because a "HIPRESS" boot is one solid wear-resisting piece. All styles—38,000 dealers.
